Reagan Loses Again

CHICAGO (AP) — President Ford won the Illinois presidential primary election Tuesday night and called it "another real clincher" over Republican challenger Ronald Reagan. Georgia's Jimmy Carter swept to a runaway Democratic victory that enhanced his credentials as the frontrunning candidate.

Furthermore, Carter was leading for a big bloc of Illinois delegates to the Democratic national convention. And while those returns were coming in slowly, it was evident he would do better than expected in that phase of the Illinois contest.

Ford won in a runaway after edging Reagan by narrow margins in their first two contested primaries. All told, Illinois made it five elections in a row for the President, and left the former California governor to fight for his campaign life in contests just ahead.

Nonetheless, Reagan issued a statement in California claiming that there are better times ahead for his campaign, and saying he intends to continue it.

Carter rolled past Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace as Illinois Democrats left Sargent Shriver a far-back third. Shriver, the 1972 vice presidential nominee, virtually folded his campaign.

He said he would run only in the Texas primary on May 1 and in Maryland, his home state, on May 18. Shriver said it was evident that the primary route wasn't for him.

It clearly was for Carter. "I did not expect to win nearly this big," he said, with partial returns putting his share of the popular vote at 48 per cent.

Ford was gaining 59 per cent of the Republican vote.

Both were favored to win their presidential preference tests, which were purely for show and psychology, binding no nominating delegates.

Delegates were elected separately, with candidates running in each of the 24 congressional districts.

Carter was showing surprising strength there, leading for more than 50 delegate seats, about twice as many as had been expected. However, Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, a favorite son who was the vehicle for Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's effort to dominate the delegation, was running ahead of him.

But those were partial returns, some districts had yet to be heard from, and the delegate lineup was not clear.

In the presidential preference test, with 47 per cent of the 11,272 precincts counted, this was the Republican picture:

Ford 189,514 or 60 per cent.

Reagan 124,816 or 39 per cent.

Lar Daly, a perennial Illinois candidate, 3,419 or one per cent.

Only 17 per cent of the precincts had been counted in the delegate competition, and Ford led for 57 nominating votes, Reagan for 13, uncommitted candidates for 14.

Among the Democrats it shaped up this way:

Carter 300,402 or 48 per cent.

Wallace 164,945 or 26 per cent.

Shriver 109,188 or 18 per cent.

Former Sen. Fred Harris 50,571 or 8 per cent.

Democrats were settling contests for a 169-member delegation, which will be the fourth biggest at their national convention.

Candidates pledged to Stevenson led for 61 convention seats; Carter led for 53 seats; uncommitted candidates for 9, Wallace for 8, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey for 3, Gov. Daniel Walker for one.

Walker had other problems. He was defeated for renomination by Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett, Daley's hand-picked candidate.

Ford, in a speech telephoned to a Republican dinner in Grand Rapids, Mich., said: "That's a great victory and another real clincher in our effort to win the nomination and to go on to victory on Nov. 2. We're going to keep up our unbroken string of victories."

And Reagan insisted that he wasn't about to consider quitting. He put the best face he could on his Illinois drubbing. "We appear to have met our goal in Illinois with something over 40 per cent of the vote," he said, although the partial returns had him hovering just below that level.

State College Increases Advanced

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

After tentatively approving the Appropriations Committee's budget proposal for state colleges, the Unicameral Tuesday circled aimlessly around the University of Nebraska recommendations.

With Appropriations Chairman Richard Marvel opposing the committee's NU proposals, no other committee member took the lead in attempting to push for their adoption.

The result was an hour of thrashing about over figures.

Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance acted as floor leader for the state college recommendations, and won 27-13 approval of committee amendments which added about $1.7 million to the original appropriations bill.

Stull had earlier successfully argued for their adoption in the committee.

Strong Support

His motion won strong support from the Douglas and Lancaster County delegations, and opposing votes from Marvel and Appropriations Vice Chairman Robert Clark of Sidney.

The $14.3 million state tax funding figure is almost $800,000 above the recommendation of Gov. J. James Exon.

But the committee's revised figures are "reasonable," Stull argued.

Lincoln and Omaha senators, whose hometown campus funding figures will be considered next in the NU budget proposal, voted 10-1 in favor of Stull's motion.

Marvel 'A Rebel'

As discussion began on the higher education funding bill, LB690, Marvel identified himself as "a rebel" who will refuse to support the committee's recommendations.

The $258 million bill includes nearly $123 million in state tax funding.

It's the committee's $95.3 million tax fund proposal for NU which is expected to form the centerpiece for this year's legislative budget battle. That recommendation is more than $11 million higher than the figure proposed by the governor.

The bill provides NU and state colleges with 7% hikes in salary budgets, and flexibility to distribute the money among employes as they see fit. All, or none, could be rewarded on the basis of merit.

Sen. Frank Lewis attempted in vain to amend that policy to assure each non-professional worker a 7% across-the-board wage hike. That proposal was rejected on a 16-19 count.

Transfer Prevented

But the committee plan does prevent administrators from using money from the 7% pool for non-professional workers to fund faculty or administrative staff pay.

Immediately at issue in the NU budget debate are committee amendments which would add about $7.3 million to the original $88 million general fund recommendation.

Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus suggested that each item in those additions be discussed and considered separately.

Even at the original $88 million figure, Dworak noted, the budget would be $11 million above the current university budget and nearly $4 million above Exon's proposal.

Tedious Limbo

But when senators adjourned for the night, the discussion had floated into tedious limbo with no clear direction of the route which the Legislature wished to follow.

Here is the vote on Stull's state colleges motion:

For: Anderson, Barnett, Bereuter, Burbach, Carsten, Chambers, Cope, DeCamp, Duis, Fowler, Goodrich, Hasebroock, Johnson, Keyes, Kime, Luedtke, Mills, Moylan, Murphy, Nichol, Savage, Schmit, Simpson, Stull, Swigart, Syas, Wiltse.

Against: Burrows, Clark, Dworak, George, Kelly, Koch, Kremer, F. Lewis, R. Lewis, Maresh, Marvel, Rumery, Stoney.

Absent or Not Voting: Cavanaugh, Dickinson, Fitzgerald, Kennedy, Mahoney, Marsh, Rasmussen, Skarda, Warner.

SeTech's Lincoln Space Use Said Poor

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln campus Director David Buettner said Tuesday a building study reveals Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College has "a very, very poor operation at this point" regarding the space it leases throughout the city.

Agreeing, the SeTech Area Board decided unanimously to develop "a plan to resolve the facilities problem" and present recommendations for possible action in April.

Board member Betty Schlaphoff of Waverly was named chairman of the study committee.

Dr. Buettner was telling the board nothing new when he said the six major SeTech buildings pose barriers to programs and development. After a study, the board in December 1974 endorsed building a new $6.7 million campus.

New Board In

But a majority of the board has since been replaced at the polls, and the new board has indicated it wants to make its own building or renovation decision. Several months ago, the board directed Buettner to determine what programs require what space.

Buettner said he found a "very serious problem" and asked the board to move "as rapidly as you can" on it. In a companion action, the board authorized Buettner to develop an ongoing "educational specifications" analysis, using SeTech staff and consultants.

Regardless of any future board decision to build or renovate, Buettner said, the specifications will be needed as a basis for working drawings and plans.

Lincoln board member Don Nielsen originally proposed SeTech begin looking for a new site. At several members' requests, however, he modified the motion to merely developing a way to solve the space problem.

Bryan Said Unsatisfactory

Nielsen said he thinks Bryan School, which SeTech leases from the Lincoln Public Schools, has unsatisfactory space or potential for renovation to serve SeTech's vocational-technical program needs. But he said buying now partially-leased Whittier Junior High is still "possible but unpopular."

Buettner replied he believes it would be a mistake to overlook the "emotional" perceptions of any SeTech campus, citing the importance of its visual image in the community. "A facility can plan an important role."

Buettner indicated Whittier's location and proximity to the University of Nebraska campus could be detrimental.

In any case, the director said, SeTech will continue renting space in public school buildings, churches and other civic space for Lincoln campus adult education programs to serve more people. And the Watson Building on No. 17th will also be kept for technical programs.

'Situation Not Efficient'

But the current building situation bars continuity, efficiency and smooth training, Buettner said. For example, medical assistance students must make frequent cross-town trips for business programs and clinical training. Moreover, he said administrative efforts including developing interdepartmental cooperation are thus hampered and sporadic.

In his written report to the board, Buettner declared a "need for improved and more permanent facilities," and cited "inappropriate, inadequate and in some cases non-existent facilities" that are "essential" to campus operation.

Buettner also noted problems of "stability and security."

Yet Buettner said he draws "no sweeping conclusions" from the study, limited to existing programs and functions, the latter including student services, for instance.

Iowa Schools Studied

For comparisons, Buettner and board members visited four of the 15 Iowa area community colleges, some of which have single buildings with more space than Lincoln's total of 100,000 square feet.

Buettner said he's refining the study findings, and the board agreed to participate in defining the basis to identity space deficiencies that could lead to new construction or renovation, or a combination of the two.

He proposed extending the study, through the educational specifications, to include future program and function space requirements.

Lincoln board member Earl Kraft said he agrees with an accreditation team report, which observes that the campus uses buildings designed for other purposes, and recommends SeTech acquire a site and build a campus to accommodate its instructional program.

G. Alan Dunlap of Milford said there are "no valid reasons" for buying Whittier, and he tended toward new construction. "We've sat too long and not done anything."

Missouri Law Said 'Chilling' Candidates

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Missouri Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick Tuesday told a gathering in Lincoln that an election reform act passed by an initiative drive there has had "a chilling effect" on candidates seeking local elective offices.

Kirkpatrick, a Democrat, said qualified professional people have been discouraged from seeking public office because of the law's requirement that candidates must report all sources of personal income.

Fifteen state senators listened to Kirkpatrick's remarks on Missouri's experience with election reform during a breakfast. Senators are considering a bill, LB987, dealing with campaign finance, conflict of interest and lobbying which was introduced to head off a petition drive by Common Cause and other groups to enact the "Sunshine Initiative."

His visit was sponsored by a number of groups on both sides of the issue. The groups are the Nebraska Republican Party, League of Women Voters, Omaha Chamber of Commerce, Nebraska Motor Carriers, Nebraska State Education Association, Omaha Retail Merchants, Association of Commerce and Industry, Livestock Feeders Association, the Nebraska Political Action Committee and the Farm Bureau.

No Ax To Grind

Kirkpatrick stressed at a press conference that his appearance was not to tell Nebraskans to vote against the Sunshine Initiative, but to relate Missouri's experience.

Nebraska's proposed Sunshine Initiative is different from Missouri's. The Nebraska proposal would not require most local office holders to disclose personal finances. It would apply to the 29 largest cities and 38 most populous counties.

The Nebraska version goes beyond campaign finances and deals with lobbyists' spending income as well as expenditures on members of the executive and legislative branches of government.

Missouri In 'Mess'

Ms. Marge Schlitt, representing the Coalition for Open Government which is sponsoring the petition effort, said Missouri's law has caused "a great mess."

"We are aware of these problems . . . It has been worded so this will not happen in Nebraska. Doctor-patient, lawyer-client and business relationships will remain confidential," she said.

Lloyd Herbener, executive director of the State Republican Party which is opposing the Sunshine effort, said Ms. Schlitt's conclusions are "debatable."

As evidence of the "chilling" impact the Missouri law has had, Kirkpatrick cited the retirement of the senior state senator, an attorney, who refused to list two of his clients as sources of income.

No Patients' Names

Likewise, he said the mayor of Columbia was a psychiatrist and did not want to disclose names of patients.

The political parties have also been hurt, he added. A survey of Democratic Party committee members showed 82% said they would not file again for office if forced to disclose income.

Kirkpatrick said strengthened campaign contribution and expenditure laws were needed to restore faith in government and said he supported those portions of the law.

"It used to be in public life it was presumed you were an honest man. Now it's presumed you're dishonest unless you can prove otherwise," he said.

Father Says Patty 'Strong-Willed' But Not Rebel

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Randolph A. Hearst took the witness stand Tuesday to defend his daughter Patricia, describing her as "strong-willed" but not a rebel ready for conversion to terrorism.

Hearst also accused a prosecution psychiatric expert of urging him to become involved in "plea bargaining" rather than go forward with his daughter's bank robbery trial.

But the main point of the newspaper executive's testimony was that his 22-year-old daughter was not the rebel described in prosecution testimony the day before by Dr. Harry Kozol.

"She was a very bright girl, pretty," said Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner. "She was strong-willed, I think. She was fun to be with."

The day ended without completion of testimony in the trial, now in its eighth week. But defense attorney F. Lee Bailey indicated later he expected closing arguments to begin Thursday, with the case going to the jury possibly that afternoon.

Bailey said outside court that he would have at least one more witness — Miss Hearst's mother, Catherine. A bid by the prosecution to call more witnesses was turned down by the judge, at least temporarily.

In his testimony, Hearst was asked by Bailey if he recognized Kozol's descriptions of his daughter as angry and bitter, a rebel in search of a cause.

"No," he said firmly.

He described how his daughter would come to visit the family frequently when she was living away from home with her fiance and said he had told psychiatrists "about the same thing I'm telling you now.

"She was fun to be with. She had a strong personality and was pretty independent."

Then he told of his meeting with Dr. Joel Fort, who testified that he advised against a public trial for Miss Hearst but denied he was seeking to "fix" the case, as charged by Bailey.

"He (Fort) suggested — he didn't use the word, but plea bargaining was what it amounted to," Hearst said.

Before her father took the stand, Miss Hearst and her "best friend" of schooldays traded grins across the courtroom. Patricia Tobin said from the witness stand she wanted to help Miss Hearst "any way I could."

The 21-year-old Miss Tobin, who walked into the bank robbery trial with her fingers crossed in a good-luck gesture, sought to give jurors an alternate explanation of a damaging tape-recorded talk she had with the heiress defendant two days after Miss Hearst was arrested.

She also swore she had never told the FBI that Miss Hearst probably had joined the Symbionese Liberation Army which kidnaped her two years ago. She denied virtually every damaging statement about Miss Hearst attributed to her in FBI reports.

As she took the stand, the bespectacled Miss Tobin told jurors she was the daughter of Michael de Young Tobin, president of the Hibernia Bank. Miss Hearst is on trial for robbing a branch of that bank.

Miss Tobin told jurors how she and Miss Hearst met "the summer after fourth grade at the Burlingame Country Club" and remained "best friends" for 12 years.

Under questioning by defense attorney Albert Johnson, Miss Tobin portrayed her old friend as a changed person when they met at the San Mateo County Jail last Sept. 20, two days after Miss Hearst's arrest.

It was then, in a bugged conversation, that Miss Hearst spoke of her "revolutionary feminist perspective," expressed anger at being arrested, and informed her friend: "I guess I'll just tell you, my politics are different from way back when." The two young women are heard trading giggles and profanity on the tape.

But Miss Tobin swore that portions of the conversation were dropped and insisted that Miss Hearst seemed "dazed" during their talk.

"Her speech was very different from what it had been before, very slow. She seemed dazed," said Miss Tobin. "She didn't seem like the same person I'd known before. She didn't have any spontaneity or vitality, just droned on and sighed a lot."

Miss Tobin was the fourth witness called in a rapid defense rebuttal which was to wind up testimony in the trial.

Three earlier witnesses attacked the reputation of a prosecution psychiatric expert, Dr. Joel Fort.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Randolph A. Hearst took the witness stand Tuesday to defend his daughter Patricia, describing her as "strong-willed" but not a rebel ready for conversion to terrorism.

Hearst also accused a prosecution psychiatric expert of urging him to become involved in "plea bargaining" rather than go forward with his daughter's bank robbery trial.

But the main point of the newspaper executive's testimony was that his 22-year-old daughter was not the rebel described in prosecution testimony the day before by Dr. Harry Kozol.

"She was a very bright girl, pretty," said Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner. "She was strong-willed, I think. She was fun to be with."

The day ended without completion of testimony in the trial, now in its eighth week. But defense attorney F. Lee Bailey indicated later he expected closing arguments to begin Thursday, with the case going to the jury possibly that afternoon.

Bailey said outside court that he would have at least one more witness — Miss Hearst's mother, Catherine. A bid by the prosecution to call more witnesses was turned down by the judge, at least temporarily.

In his testimony, Hearst was asked by Bailey if he recognized Kozol's descriptions of his daughter as angry and bitter, a rebel in search of a cause.

"No," he said firmly.

He described how his daughter would come to visit the family frequently when she was living away from home with her fiance and said he had told psychiatrists "about the same thing I'm telling you now.

"She was fun to be with. She had a strong personality and was pretty independent."

Then he told of his meeting with Dr. Joel Fort, who testified that he advised against a public trial for Miss Hearst but denied he was seeking to "fix" the case, as charged by Bailey.

"He (Fort) suggested — he didn't use the word, but plea bargaining was what it amounted to," Hearst said.

Before her father took the stand, Miss Hearst and her "best friend" of schooldays traded grins across the courtroom. Patricia Tobin said from the witness stand she wanted to help Miss Hearst "any way I could."

The 21-year-old Miss Tobin, who walked into the bank robbery trial with her fingers crossed in a good-luck gesture, sought to give jurors an alternate explanation of a damaging tape-recorded talk she had with the heiress defendant two days after Miss Hearst was arrested.

She also swore she had never told the FBI that Miss Hearst probably had joined the Symbionese Liberation Army which kidnaped her two years ago. She denied virtually every damaging statement about Miss Hearst attributed to her in FBI reports.

As she took the stand, the bespectacled Miss Tobin told jurors she was the daughter of Michael de Young Tobin, president of the Hibernia Bank. Miss Hearst is on trial for robbing a branch of that bank.

Miss Tobin told jurors how she and Miss Hearst met "the summer after fourth grade at the Burlingame Country Club" and remained "best friends" for 12 years.

Under questioning by defense attorney Albert Johnson, Miss Tobin portrayed her old friend as a changed person when they met at the San Mateo County Jail last Sept. 20, two days after Miss Hearst's arrest.

It was then, in a bugged conversation, that Miss Hearst spoke of her "revolutionary feminist perspective," expressed anger at being arrested, and informed her friend: "I guess I'll just tell you, my politics are different from way back when." The two young women are heard trading giggles and profanity on the tape.

But Miss Tobin swore that portions of the conversation were dropped and insisted that Miss Hearst seemed "dazed" during their talk.

"Her speech was very different from what it had been before, very slow. She seemed dazed," said Miss Tobin. "She didn't seem like the same person I'd known before. She didn't have any spontaneity or vitality, just droned on and sighed a lot."

Miss Tobin was the fourth witness called in a rapid defense rebuttal which was to wind up testimony in the trial.

Three earlier witnesses attacked the reputation of a prosecution psychiatric expert, Dr. Joel Fort.

Pentagon Pair Scolded

Washington (AP) — Dr. Malcolm R. Currie, the Pentagon's research chief, was severely reprimanded Tuesday night by Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, who ordered him to forfeit four weeks' pay for accepting hospitality from Rockwell International.

At the same time, Rumsfeld delivered a "letter of admonition" to Secretary of the Navy J. William Middendorf for accepting an invitation to a Chesapeake Bay goose hunting lodge owned by Rockwell

The actions were announced by Pentagon spokesman William Greener following several hours of conferences in Rumsfeld's office.

The financial penalty to Currie comes to about $3,200, said Greener.

Middendorf was given a less severe reprimand apparently because Rumsfeld felt there were mitigating circumstances.

Currie, the department's fourth-ranking official, supervises a $10-billion research program. Rockwell is developing the B1 bomber, which could be one of the Pentagon's biggest programs, worth about $21 4 billion.

According to Greener, Currie and his 13-year-old daughter flew to Rockwell's Bimini resort in the Bahamas aboard a company plane from Miami, stayed two days and flew back to Washington aboard the plane.

Rumsfeed has said that "I will land all over individuals' who step outside the bounds of proper conduct

Greener said Currie went to Bimini with Robert Anderson, chief executive officer of Rockwell International, the nation's 10th largest defense contractor.

Greener did not give a date, but sources indicated this occurred six months ago, long after Deputy Secretary of Defense William Clements had issued his Jan 15, 1975, memorandum telling senior officials, "There will be absolutely no relationship with defense contractors which violates, or appears to violate, the provisions" of the standards of conduct regulation.

In addition, Greener said, Currie must pay Rockwell for the airplane flights and stay on Bimini.

As for Middendorf, Greener said the Navy secretary was invited by Iranian Ambassador Ardeshir Zahedi to go goose hunting on Wye Island on Maryland's eastern shore on Jan. 15, 1975, the day Clements issued his memorandum.

Greener said Middendorf arrived at the lodge at night and went out hunting the next day. Greener said Middendorf realized only this month it was a Rockwell lodge. The Navy secretary has sent a $20 check to the ambassador to cover some expenses, Greener said.

Hue And Cry Forces HEW To Drop Plan

Washington (UPI) — Overwhelming public reaction has forced the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to drop plans to enforce civil rights laws on a selective basis, HEW Secretary David Mathews said Tuesday.

"Public comment . . . was overwhelmingly negative," Mathews said of the proposal to have the agency's office of civil rights handle only the most serious or significant discrimination complaints, rather than attempt to investigate every case.

"Every organized civil rights group opposed it," Mathews said. "Other organizations representing every point on the political spectrum opposed it. Individual comments were almost unanimously in the same vein "

He said the backlog of civil rights cases now totals 1,800, compared to just 50 in 1969. The department will consider seeking help from other government agencies, possibly at both the federal and state level. Mathews said.

FBI Knows Plot Fake, Paper Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A terrorist plot to kill President Ford and Ronald Reagan at the Republican National Convention this summer is known by government officials to be a fake, it was reported today.

The Washington Star said FBI officials knew, although they did not disclose it in public statements on the case Monday, that the plot was a fake. The newspaper attributed the report to informed sources.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Times said a man arrested in a raid on a terrorist hideout told authorities that San Francisco Bay area radicals made the assassination plans. The Times identified the man as Gregg D. Adornetto, 26.

The Times said Adornetto was arrested Feb. 21 with five others in a Richmond, Calif., house where officers found 150 pounds of explosives, 85 blasting caps, an assembled bomb and timing devices. The FBI said literature linking the six with a terrorist group known as the Emiliano Zapata Unit was also found in the house.

The Emiliano Zapata Unit has taken responsibility in recent months for bombing Safeway stores in northern California.

FBI Director Clarence Kelley said Monday that the agency has information alleging that "a member of a terrorist group" was planning to assasinate the President and Reagan at the GOP convention in Kansas City this August. Kelley said the claim was still unsubstantiated but added that it was under "intensive investigation" by both the FBI and Secret Service.

The Star quoted its sources as saying the FBI and Secret Service had developed evidence before Monday's statement about the alleged plot to show that "no group was planning any such thing. There was no plot."

The plot story originated in a telephone tip to the FBI's San Francisco office, the Star said, but quoted its sources as saying it was later determined that the tip "was not based on any facts. We did some checking, but there was no basis for allegation."

Increased Output Sign Of Stable Growth

Washington (AP) — American industry increased production at a slightly accelerated rate in February, the Federal Reserve Board reported Tuesday, indicating stable growth in the nation's economy.

The output of factories, mines and utilities, which provide about one-third of the nation's jobs, showed a gain in February of six-tenths of 1 per cent

Other economic reports Tuesday showed quickened activity in the housing construction industry and a gain in the size of inventories kept on hand by manufacturers and merchants.

The number of new houses started climbed by a record 27 per cent in February over January to an annual rate of 1.55 million units. The housing industry had been a weak link in the general economic recovery.

And the Commerce Department also reported that manufacturing and trade inventories climbed $1.2 billion in January, reversing December's drop of $1.3 billion. That signaled that business may be ready to rebuild stocks and thus step up output to replenish warehouses.

The broadest of the economic measures put out by the government, however, was industrial production. The February advance, coming on the heels of a .5 per cent climb in January and a .9 per cent advance in December was the tenth monthly advance in a row and moved industrial output 9 per cent above the low point reached in April, 1975.

Industrial production remained, however, 6 per cent below the pre-recession peak of November, 1973.

The Federal Reserve Board said the February gain was due largely to increased production by manufacturers turning out consumer durable goods, such as automobiles and appliances.

Auto assemblies increased by nearly 7 per cent to an annual rate of 8.1 million units, the Federal Reserve said. It said further increases are on schedule for March and April in the auto industry.

In the housing industry, the gain in starts surpassed the previous record rise of 23 per cent in February last year and reversed a decline of 4.16 per cent in January.

The number of building permits issued, a signal of future activity in the industry, increased for the second month in a row. The increase amounted to .6 per cent to a total of 1.13 million at an annual rate.

The report comes on the heel of a Federal Home Loan Bank Board report that the net new savings flowing into federally insured savings and loan institutions hit a record $5 1 billion last month.

The combined reports signal a larger selection of new homes for home buyers in the months ahead and greater ease in finding a loan, which could be at lower rates. That translates, in turn, into better prospects for the lumber, appliance and other industries which depend on new home construction.

But the housing industry report contained little cheer for renters, since the higher volume of starts was accounted for solely by single-family dwellings. Apartment starts were down 9.2 per cent.

Rise Ahead In Coffee Prices

Washington (UPI) — A State Department official said Tuesday Americans can expect to pay more for a cup of coffee in months ahead, but should blame the weather and other unforeseeable events, not market manipulation.

Julius L. Katz, assistant acting secretary for business and economic affairs, said the retail price of coffee has risen about 25% a pound since last July when frost severely damaged or killed half the coffee trees in Brazil.

The frost, coupled with floods in Colombia, earthquakes in Guatemala, the civil war in Angola and a dockworkers strike in a Kenyan port, diminished the supply of green coffee, he said. And since reserve stocks were low to begin with, the price of green coffee responded dramatically.

Testifying at a House agriculture subcommittee hearing, Katz said "to the best of my knowledge, the price performance has been a market phenomenon, and I'm not aware of any manipulation of exports" or the domestic market.

Representatives of two big domestic firms, Maxwell House and the Folger Coffee Co., also blamed the increases on market factors "beyond our control." They said domestic prices increased instantly because the U.S. coffee industry sets product prices on the "replacement cost" of green coffee.

Katz declined to speculate on projections by a Boston commodity consultant firm that coffee prices within a year may rise to $2.30 a pound — or another 50% above the current average price of $1.52.

But he said prices will go up further — he would not say how much — in coming months and then level off.

Katz said while the frost damage in Brazil is likely to cut export supplies through 1979, "barring some new catastrophe" there will be no acute coffee shortage for the next several years.

Several subcommittee members questioned the wisdom of a new international coffee agreement which would authorize U.S. participation in a promotional effort to encourage greater consumption at a time when prices are rising.

The pact allows an assessment of 25 cents for each 132-pound bag of coffee produced in major exporting countries — estimated to bring in $13 million a year — for advertisement and promotion of coffee.

Baby Toll-Free

Rosemont, Ill. (AP) — The stork won a race on the Illinois Tollway, and an 8-pound baby girl arrived toll-free in the washroom of the River Road Plaza near O'Hare International Airport.

Sara Hernandez, 18, and her husband, Manuel, were driving to the hospital when, at a tollbooth, Hernandez announced that his wife was about to give birth. A policeman and a state trooper helped deliver the baby in the washroom.

"I had a sterile sheet in my emergency first-aid equipment and we used that," said trooper Myron Choisser, 24, father of one child.

The mother and baby, Grace Marie, were taken to a hospital where attendants said they were doing fine. It was the young mother's third child.

Choisser said, "I went back to patrol, but thank goodness nothing more happened. My wife says she's proud of me and I can deliver our next "

Baby Toll-Free

Rosemont, Ill. (AP) — The stork won a race on the Illinois Tollway, and an 8-pound baby girl arrived toll-free in the washroom of the River Road Plaza near O'Hare International Airport.

Sara Hernandez, 18, and her husband, Manuel, were driving to the hospital when, at a tollbooth, Hernandez announced that his wife was about to give birth. A policeman and a state trooper helped deliver the baby in the washroom.

"I had a sterile sheet in my emergency first-aid equipment and we used that," said trooper Myron Choisser, 24, father of one child.

The mother and baby, Grace Marie, were taken to a hospital where attendants said they were doing fine. It was the young mother's third child.

Choisser said, "I went back to patrol, but thank goodness nothing more happened. My wife says she's proud of me and I can deliver our next."

Prime Minister Wilson Resigns

WILSON . . . relaxed and smiling after quitting.

AP

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson stunned Britain by resigning Tuesday, throwing the nation into political upheaval at a time when the pound's value is at an historic low and the country is in severe economic straits.

The scrappy, pipe-puffing politician, who turned 60 last Thursday, cited age as the reason and said he would step down as soon as the 317 Laborites in the House of Commons can elect a successor.

His resignation does not automatically mean new general elections, but his Labor successor might seek a mandate of his own from Britain's 40 million voters.

Opposition leader Margaret Thatcher, 50, who would be prime minister if her Conservative party won, called immediately for a general election later this year. Wilson shot back in the House of Commons, to gales of laughter, "I'm sure she's not all that keen on it either."

Wilson's current five-year term began after elections in February 1974 and does not expire until October 1979. Wilson has served a total of eight years as prime minister and 13 as Labor party leader.

The Laborites will vote next week and the result will be announced March 25, party chairman Cledwyn Hughes said. He said if a second ballot is needed the result will be announced March 30, and if a third is necessary the result will be declared April 5.

Speculation on Wilson's successor centered on 63-year-old Foreign Secretary James Callaghan, and bookmakers were giving him 5-4 odds to get the job.

The London Evening Standard called the resignation a "breathtaking shock," and said it "cannot fail to cause a considerable upheaval" in economically ailing Britain.

The White House reacted by saying the announcement was "considered to be an internal British political matter."

In a nationally televised news conference after his resignation, Wilson said the timing of his announcement had nothing to do with a left-wing revolt in his Labor party last week that led to the defeat of a government proposal to slash public spending by $6 billion.

Questioned about his health, Wilson, who still drinks four or five pints of beer daily, said, "I'm as fit as a flea." Asked if he was happy about quitting, said: "No, I am not happy. It is a sad moment in many ways — but you feel a release of burdens falling off your shoulders."

Wilson said that while he was giving up as prime minister, the fourth such move in Britain in 21 years, he would "remain in Parliament as long as my constituency will put up with me."

He said in a lengthy written statement he had planned for some time to leave office at 60. But he had given no public hint of his intentions and the announcement came like a bombshell. Members of Parliament rushed from committee rooms and conferred excitedly in the corridors of Westminster Palace.

The ailing pound sterling took a dive. The Bank of England intervened to buy sterling, but the pound, which went below the $2 mark for the first time in history March 5, was fetching only about $1.9160 in late afternoon dealings.

Wilson began his first term as prime minister on Oct. 16, 1964, in much the same position as he now bows out, with a knife-edge majority. He first entered No. 10 Downing Street as head of a government with a majority of just three in the 635-seat House of Commons, and with that he had to deal with a threatened dock strike, a grave balance-of-payments crisis and a run on the pound.

He leaves office with an over-all parliamentary lead of one, more than ever at odds with the left of his party.

Wilson had two terms as premier from 1964 to 1970, when he was ousted by the Conservatives then under the leadership of Edward Heath. Wilson returned to power in the general elections of Feb. 28, 1974, and kept the premiership in a general election that October.

By last September he had become the longest serving peacetime prime minister this century. If he had remained in office until February 1977, Wilson would have surpassed even Herbert Asquith and Churchill, who each served 8½ years during wartime.

The resignation announcement capped a political career that included 31 years in the House of Commons, and, as he put it, "13 exciting and turbulent years" as leader of the Labor party.

Wilson's political shiftings to keep the party and country together have prompted criticism that he is a master of political expediency, and Mrs. Thatcher last week uttered this taunt in the House of Commons: "Power without authority, power without principle, a position admirably suited to the prime minister."

Mrs. Thatcher's jibe came after Wilson's government survived a crucial vote of confidence in the House of Commons on Thursday night. The 297-280 vote in favor of Wilson's economic policies was made necessary by a revolt of 37 left-wing Laborites in the house the previous day.

They abstained in a vote on government plans to slash public spending by $6 billion, causing a stinging 28-vote defeat for the government. But on Thursday the rebels, as expected, voted for the government to keep it in power.

The left-winger's votes indicated that, although they may vehemently disagree with Wilson's policies, they regarded his Labor government as preferable to a Conservative one. The vote also tended to refute any suggestion that the left-wingers were behind Wilson's resignation announcement.

Wilson was born March 11, 1916, in the grimy Yorkshire town of Huddersfield, and at age 8 he was photographed by his parents on the steps of 10 Downing St. At 10 he told his mother that he wanted to be prime minister one day and never deviated from that ambition.

Nebraska Primary Jeopardized

When Nebraska Secretary of State Allen J. Beermann arranged the May 11 presidential primary election ballots in February, he left off the Democratic ballot a couple of national figures who had avowed their interest in running for president.

Now Beermann is placing on the Nebraska ballot the names of two national figures who have disclaimed that they are seeking the presidency, who are not active candidates for that office — Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Edward Kennedy. The addition of those two names seemed, at first blush, to have created an interesting situation wherein the Nebraska Democratic primary could be even more of a horse race than it had previously shaped up to be. But putting the names of Kennedy and Humphrey back on the ballot could also discourage other candidates from actively campaigning in this state. These are partisan political considerations, of course, of which Beermann must be aware.

Beermann says he is following Nebraska law, which says, "If a presidential candidate files (an) affidavit removing his name, and subsequently becomes a presidential candidate in any other state by any means whatever, he shall be considered to have purged his affidavit in Nebraska and such affidavit shall have no force and effect."

Humphrey and Kennedy were originally listed by Beermann on the Nebraska Democratic primary ballot, but the two filed disclaimers of candidacy with Beermann, so their names were removed. Now Oregon, which does not have a disclaimer provision in its election law, has placed Humphrey and Kennedy on the ballot for its May 25 primary election.

Beermann, notified of Oregon's decision to include Kennedy and Humphrey, says he has no choice but to put the two back on the Nebraska ballot.

It is suggested that he does have a choice, however.

The intent of the Nebraska primary law allowing a person to disclaim candidacy here but permitting that disclaimer to be purged and his name put back on the ballot if he became a candidate elsewhere was to discourage otherwise active candidates from skipping Nebraska if they thought the political climate here would not be beneficial to them. When the law was passed it was intended to deal with candidates in active, pursuit of the presidential nomination somewhere in the country.

Kennedy is not an active candidate, no matter his standing in the polls. He has consistently said he will not run. He would file a disclaimer of candidacy in Oregon, but there is not provision to accept it there. Humphrey is not an active candidate for president, no matter the speculation that the Democratic convention will turn to him in August. He would doubtless like to have his name removed from the Oregon ballot, but there is no provision for it.

If the intent of the Nebraska law is to be considered, the names of the two senators would not be put back on the ballot because they are not active candidates who have merely tried to sidestep Nebraska. If the intent of the people in question — Kennedy and Humphrey — is to be considered, and it should be, their names would not be on the Nebraska ballot.

Consider the reasoning of the Nebraska secretary of state in 1972, when there was speculation that the name of Edward Kennedy would be placed on the Nebraska ballot because the Oregon secretary of state also placed Kennedy's name on his state's ballot that year, even though Kennedy said he was not a candidate. Said the Nebraska official in explaining his decision to keep Kennedy's name off the 1972 Nebraska primary ballot: "Oregon does not have a disclaimer provision. In every state where his name has appeared on a tentative ballot, Kennedy has consistently asked to have his name taken off. But he wasn't a voluntary candidate in Oregon. The Oregon secretary of state put him on the list involuntarily."

This was Allen J. Beermann speaking in 1972. Why has he switched his thinking in 1976? It would appear that again, he is playing somewhat fast and loose with Nebraska election laws and procedures.

This could ultimately diminish the importance of the Nebraska primary. Candidates will not know what to expect; they will have no idea of how the election law will be interpreted and who will be on the ballot. Although active candidates will still have their names on the ballot here, they may decide to avoid active campaigning here and it will take much of the national spotlight away from Nebraska, and voters here will lose contact with the candidates — contact they won't have during the general election contest when the nominees concentrate on high population density areas.

If that happens, Beermann's playing games with the primary ballot will not only be bad for the public figures involved — candidates and noncandidates — but it will be a serious disservice to the people of Nebraska.

From Morn Till Tight

WASHINGTON — On this particular day I rose and found there was no shaving soap, so I went around the corner and bought some, and the city and the state taxed me 6%. This is the beard tax.

Later — had a haircut and the city taxed it. They had taxed my head and they had taxed my jaw, so I said, "Why not let them tax my stomach?" and went out to lunch, where they taxed my meal.

After having my stomach taxed, I bought two pair of socks, which they also taxed. The day wasn't half over and I had already been taxed from head to toe.

I knew I ought to be a good citizen and let them tax my teeth, so I bought some tooth paste and a brush which they taxed, and went back to the office wash room and did my civic duty along the gumline.

Afterwards I did some work for the boss, and the federal government, the state and the city all taxed my pay.

I went home and they taxed my house.

The car was in the shop for repairs, so I telephoned to see if they had finished not getting it repaired correctly, and they taxed my phone call.

Then I went to pick up the car and pay for the work, and they taxed the repair, which hadn't been done correctly. This gave me a headache so I went to a drugstore and they taxed my aspirin. This is the headache tax, which is not to be confused with the hair tax collected at the barber shop, or the dandruff tax, which is collected at the shop that sells dandruff-remover shampoo which doesn't remove the dandruff.

Having had my jaw, hair, stomach, feet, teeth, salary, voice, headache, house and incompetent car repair taxed, I decided to forego the dandruff tax for the time being, which must have sent shocks of despair through thousands of politicians all the way from Albany to Washington.

To raise their spirits, I drove to a filling station and said, "Fill her up," and they taxed my gasoline.

Afterwards I parked the car in the garage, and they taxed my parking space.

When I arrived home, the new chair we had bought had just been delivered. "Is there a sales tax?" I inquired. "Eight per cent" said the in-house accountant.

So I sat down, and they taxed my seat.

Picked up a book, and they taxed my mind.

Turned up the thermostat, and they taxed my heat.

I wanted to do something high-mindedly civic, and since it was getting quite dark, the task was easy. I could either sit there in my taxed seat and suffer dangerous eye-strain by reading my taxed book, or I could turn on the electric lamp and save my vision

I turned on the lamp and they taxed my light.

I was profoundly moved by the thought of the vast sums of government revenue I was generating simply by sitting there with my eyes skimming the leisurely sentences of Henry James. Although scarcely moving a muscle, I was churning out vast sums of governmental wherewithal.

Governments were taxing my eyes, taxing my mind, taxing my seat, taxing my heat, taxing my headache and taxing the very house in which I was providing these lucrative services to government. And all the time, completely forgotten, my faithful car was sitting silently in its garage churning out new parking taxes for me to pay.

I felt so good about it that I rose and mixed a drink, and they taxed my gin.

And all the time the miracle of human biology was working away to insure that my usefulness would resume on the morrow.

Whiskers were silently growing to assure fresh payment of the beard tax next morning. Hair was toiling up out of the follicles to guarantee another barber-tax payment two weeks hence. Socks were slowly eroding to insure a constant outflux of foot-taxed payments.

The thought of it made me take three more gins quickly, and politicians smiled from coast to coast, knowing that in the morning they would rake in a surplus from the headache tax.

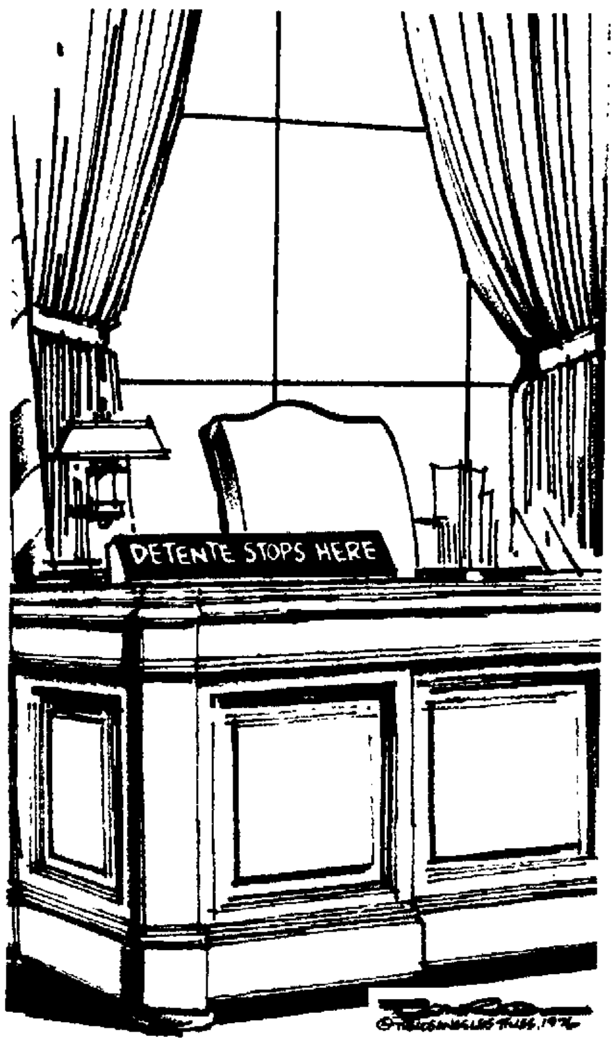
Cruise Missile And Backfire Bomber



WASHINGTON — Having banished the word "detente" from his vocabulary in this year's political campaigning, President Ford has cast doubt on his earlier determination to conclude a new strategic arms limitation agreement with Moscow before the November elections. Nevertheless, negotiations are still under way. If they produce a new pact, it probably would be signed in Washington by Ford and Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The basic framework for a new agreement is the tentative accord reached by Ford and Brezhnev at Vladivostok in November, 1974. They agreed that the United States and the Soviet Union each could have no more than 2,400 "delivery vehicles" by 1985, with no more than 1,320 of these having multiple warheads. Kissinger described the Vladivostok accord as a "breakthrough" which would "mean that a cap has been put on the arms race" for a decade.

At the time, it was thought that a final agreement would be signed in the summer of 1975, during a Brezhnev visit to this country. But the negotiations bogged down, chiefly because of inability to agree on how to deal with two weapons systems: the U.S. cruise missile and the Soviet Backfire bomber.

The cruise missile is basically a pilotless jet drone that can be launched from the air, land, surface ships or submarines. "Guided by computers, the long-range, uncannily accurate missiles can cruise and maneuver in the earth's atmosphere like airplanes and can strike within 30 feet of their programmed targets," Business Week observed, "and they have the added advantage of working as well with conventional warheads as with nuclear warheads."

Although the cruise missile is still in the experimental stage, the United States is believed to be four to six years ahead of the Soviet Union in developing such a weapon. The first air-launched cruise missile test took place March 5 over the New Mexico desert, and six additional flights are planned between now and December.

Bombers, submarines and intercontinental ballistic missiles require large facilities which can easily be detected by reconnaissance satellites, but cruise missiles do not. They can be hidden from view on submarines, surface vessels, aircraft, trains and motor vehicles. This is a major reason why the Soviet Union wants the United States to agree to limit their production.

For its part, the United States wants comparable restrictions on the Backfire bomber, which Moscow insists is a medium-range bomber designed for combat on the periphery of the Soviet Union. But some U.S. defense officials suspect the plane has intercontinental range and thus qualifies as a strategic weapon.

The question that U.S. and Soviet negotiators must resolve is whether cruise missiles and Backfires should be counted against the limit of 2,400 delivery vehicles agreed to at Vladivostok. The Ford administration reportedly is planning to offer a separate interim agreement covering cruise missiles.

The alternative to agreement almost certainly would be a costly new arms race. If both countries possessed large quantities of undetectable cruise missiles, each would suspect the other of having secretly armed all its large ships and aircraft with the weapons. The prospect should be troubling enough to serve as a major impetus toward a new strategic arms control pact.

Omaha Seeking Hold On University?

Where The Grain Goes

Lincoln, Neb.

We read where the Soviets would like to buy more American grain, at a time when they are constantly providing tanks and projectiles to African countries.

It is clear that the grain is needed in different occupied areas. I think it would be a good idea for our government, in order to avoid deceit, to determine where the additional grain is going. We do not need words and repeated warnings against Russian aggression, but facts.

The Weather Factor

No Refund On Tickets

Clatonia, Neb.

On Thursday, March 4, my husband and I and three other couples had planned to drive to Omaha for the Olivia Newton-John concert. But, because of poor weather conditions and repeated warnings by the Nebraska State Patrol NOT TO DRIVE, we decided it would be best not to chance driving the 90 miles to Omaha.

Upon calling Brandeis in Lincoln to find out if we could get our money back on our concert tickets, we found that unless the concert was cancelled, Brandeis could not refund our money.

This seems terribly unfair to us, as it was not our fault we missed the concert. We realize Olivia Newton-John had to be paid but it seems to us that for persons outside the Omaha city limits, consideration should have been given concerning a refund on our tickets.

Gang Calls Tune

Centrum No Cure

Lincoln, Neb.

Apparently the powers that be think the "Centrum" is a foregone conclusion. How can a minority of taxpayers force on the rest of the people some scheme to keep their faltering businesses going?

The trend away from downtown shopping is of too long duration to be cured by the parking garage. Then, too, it will not cost less to park a car there than in a privately owned parking garage. And last but not least, the city is using gas tax funds which were originally meant exclusively for the streets to do this project and that will mean less money for city streets that everyone uses no matter where they shop.

This is a bitter way for Lincolnites to realize they don't really control their city government but in the last analysis, the "O Street Gang" will call the tune.

Two Names Entered

Against Beermann's Decision

Hebron, Nebr.

I am very disappointed that the names of Edward Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey have been added to the Nebraska presidential primary ballot, three days after the filing deadline. If, indeed, Secretary of State Beermann had "no choice under the law," then the law should be changed.

This decision has created a political circus for the media and can only serve to embarrass Deomcrats. If Kennedy and Humphrey do poorly in Nebraska, they will be faced with a "loss" in a primary which they clearly chose not to enter. If they do well, it will be a slap in the face of every candidate who brought his campaign to the people of this state.

At best, Beermann's decision is arbitrary. If he can extend the deadline three days, why not 30? If two non-candidates are to be included, why not an announced candidate, Jerry Brown? Beermann's rationalization regarding the exclusion of Brown is a red herring.

Most important, this action constitutes an invasion of the privacy of Kennedy and Humphrey. Why should either of them be forced to have his name appear on our ballot?

Surely Nebraska need not play Jill to Oregon's Jack, tumbling down the hill with our barrel of ballots.

Traffic Light Move

Protest On Signal Change

Lincoln, Nebr.

I recently learned in a letter from the City of Lincoln that they are planning to move the push-button traffic signal presently located on the corner of 36th and Randolph, to the east, 84 feet from the curb. This will place the signal about a third of the way down the block from the corner of 36th. They claim that this new location will better serve students from both Randolph Elementary and St. Teresa's schools.

This would be a ridiculous waste of time, money and effort and would not serve the students more effectively, but only encourage their crossing on the corners without a light. Parents have taught their children to cross at corners, not a third of the way into the block.

Also, it would seem that if a valid study had been done to locate the light in the most used position, the new position would not be only 84 feet away. Moving a light only 84 feet can hardly be justified. If the city needs something worthwhile to spend their time working at, I could suggest a few projects.

I encourage interested parents and other citizens to make themselves heard. They should call the City Traffic Engineering Department and express their views against this project. I was told that it has not yet been approved, and if enough complaints are received, the plan cannot go through.

The person to ask for is Richard V. Mickelson, who is the assistant city traffic engineer.

Omaha's Scheme

Blair, Neb.

It had to happen and I'm in a minority corner with Chambers. I'm casting my vote with Ernie, Clark, Fowler, Kime and R. Lewis in their opposition to LB 1006, which is obviously an empire-building move by Omaha downtown business interests to burn up more state tax funds, with their toe-in-the-door effort to etablish a third U. of N. in Omaha front in the Omaha downtown mall area.

Since Lincoln confines its steadily burgeoning higher education to the old university campus and the Ag Campus, Omaha would have to go one better in opening up a third front to be one up on Lincoln, expanding from UN-O and the Nebraska Medical Center to an Omaha downtown supplemental campus to siphon off more higher education tax dollars.

Surely the Unicameral can see through this scheme of Omaha's to build a Nebraska University in competition to Lincoln. Surely they must know that we can ill afford two major institutions of learning in a state which will never have more than 1½ million people, with college attendance about to show a decline.

Lincoln, Nebr.

LB 819, the Unemployment Compensation Bill, apparently is about to become law, after it has been amended completely out of reason. I am sure this has not been thoroughly thought out, except by those who want to make it more difficult for the unfortunate unemployed.

Billions of people in the world, including too many in this country and state, are suffering irreparable damage due to hunger or malnutrition. Contrary to popular and legislative misconception, I know of no one who would rather have an unemployment check than a full pay-check, because at best, unemployment is around half of full pay. This misconception is nurtured by that compassionless portion of our citizenry who have never had to want for basic necessities.

A member of my family, just out of high school and junior college, got a job without any conditions except a bare minimum wage. She tried to upgrade herself by taking a much better and highly desirable job. But due to inflationary and poor economic conditions, this firm had to lay off their junior help. When she filed for unemployment compensation, she was penalized by a time element because she had quit the two-bit sweatshop job. LB 819 in its present form would make this condition much worse. Do they want to relegate us to sweatshop conditions permanently?

If Nebraska adopts LB 819 in its present form, we are simply asking for federal minimum standards in the unemployment compensation field.

Urges Salary Increase

Lincoln, Neb.

I am writing to express my support of LB 797 which is the bill to increase our state senators' salaries.

Considering the scope, pressures and responsibilities incurred by our representatives, their present salary is grossly inadequate and should be increased as soon as possible.

The passage of LB 797 and a favorable vote of the people in the November election can only increase the efficiency and improve the quality of the Legislature by providing the opportunity for younger people and middle- and low-income people who are vitally interested in the legislative process to run for and be elected to this position. The present salary prevents this and opens the legislative seats to only those persons who are independently wealthy or who are retired.

I would like to urge my fellow state employes to get behind and support LB 797. If we want, senators will understand and support us; such as the 25 senators who gave first-round approval to LB176. We must unite with the Legislature and work with them to solve our common problems.

Women In Politics

Lincoln, Neb.

I'm glad to see more and more women making the race for public office. Women are not the giddy, decorative, brainless creatures they were considered to be for so many centuries.

True, all of those running may not make the grade, but they are paving the way for their sisters to come.

If any male has anything disparaging to say, all we girls have to do is point to any area of things as they are today. They couldn't be in much more of a mess than the men have made in handling things.

Nebraska Primary Jeopardized

When Nebraska Secretary of State Allen J. Beermann arranged the May 11 presidential primary election ballots in February, he left off the Democratic ballot a couple of national figures who had avowed their interest in running for president.

Now Beermann is placing on the Nebraska ballot the names of two national figures who have disclaimed that they are seeking the presidency, who are not active candidates for that office — Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Edward Kennedy. The addition of those two names seemed, at first blush, to have created an interesting situation wherein the Nebraska Democratic primary could be even more of a horse race than it had previously shaped up to be. But putting the names of Kennedy and Humphrey back on the ballot could also discourage other candidates from actively campaigning in this state. These are partisan political considerations, of course, of which Beermann must be aware.

Beermann says he is following Nebraska law, which says, "If a presidential candidate files (an) affidavit removing his name, and subsequently becomes a presidential candidate in any other state by any means whatever, he shall be considered to have purged his affidavit in Nebraska and such affidavit shall have no force and effect."

Humphrey and Kennedy were originally listed by Beermann on the Nebraska Democratic primary ballot, but the two filed disclaimers of candidacy with Beermann, so their names were removed. Now Oregon, which does not have a disclaimer provision in its election law, has placed Humphrey and Kennedy on the ballot for its May 25 primary election.

Beermann, notified of Oregon's decision to include Kennedy and Humphrey, says he has no choice but to put the two back on the Nebraska ballot.

It is suggested that he does have a choice, however.

The intent of the Nebraska primary law allowing a person to disclaim candidacy here but permitting that disclaimer to be purged and his name put back on the ballot if he became a candidate elsewhere was to discourage otherwise active candidates from skipping Nebraska if they thought the political climate here would not be beneficial to them. When the law was passed it was intended to deal with candidates in active pursuit of the presidential nomination somewhere in the country.

Kennedy is not an active candidate, no matter his standing in the polls. He has consistently said he will not run. He would file a disclaimer of candidacy in Oregon, but there is not provision to accept it there. Humphrey is not an active candidate for president, no matter the speculation that the Democratic convention will turn to him in August. He would doubtless like to have his name removed from the Oregon ballot, but there is no provision for it.

If the intent of the Nebraska law is to be considered, the names of the two senators would not be put back on the ballot because they are not active candidates who have merely tried to sidestep Nebraska. If the intent of the people in question — Kennedy and Humphrey — is to be considered, and it should be, their names would not be on the Nebraska ballot.

Consider the reasoning of the Nebraska secretary of state in 1972, when there was speculation that the name of Edward Kennedy would be placed on the Nebraska ballot because the Oregon secretary of state also placed Kennedy's name on his state's ballot that year, even though Kennedy said he was not a candidate. Said the Nebraska official in explaining his decision to keep Kennedy's name off the 1972 Nebraska primary ballot: "Oregon does not have a disclaimer provision. In every state where his name has appeared on a tentative ballot, Kennedy has consistently asked to have his name taken off. But he wasn't a voluntary candidate in Oregon. The Oregon secretary of state put him on the list involuntarily."

This was Allen J. Beermann speaking in 1972. Why has he switched his thinking in 1976? It would appear that again, he is playing somewhat fast and loose with Nebraska election laws and procedures.

This could ultimately diminish the importance of the Nebraska primary. Candidates will not know what to expect; they will have no idea of how the election law will be interpreted and who will be on the ballot. Although active candidates will still have their names on the ballot here, they may decide to avoid active campaigning here and it will take much of the national spotlight away from Nebraska, and voters here will lose contact with the candidates — contact they won't have during the general election contest when the nominees concentrate on high population density areas.

If that happens, Beermann's playing games with the primary ballot will not only be bad for the public figures involved — candidates and noncandidates — but it will be a serious disservice to the people of Nebraska.

From Morn Till Tight

WASHINGTON — On this particular day I rose and found there was no shaving soap, so I went around the corner and bought some, and the city and the state taxed me 8%. This is the beard tax.

Later — had a haircut and the city taxed it. They had taxed my head and they had taxed my jaw, so I said, "Why not let them tax my stomach?" and went out to lunch, where they taxed my meal.

After having my stomach taxed, I bought two pair of socks, which they also taxed. The day wasn't half over and I had already been taxed from head to toe.

I knew I ought to be a good citizen and let them tax my teeth, so I bought some tooth paste and a brush which they taxed, and went back to the office wash room and did my civic duty along the gumline.

Afterwards I did some work for the boss, and the federal government, the state and the city all taxed my pay.

I went home and they taxed my house.

The car was in the shop for repairs, so I telephoned to see if they had finished not getting it repaired correctly, and they taxed my phone call.

Then I went to pick up the car and pay for the work, and they taxed the repair, which hadn't been done correctly. This gave me a headache so I went to a drugstore and they taxed my aspirin. This is the headache tax, which is not to be confused with the hair tax collected at the barber shop, or the dandruff tax, which is collected at the shop that sells dandruff-remover shampoo which doesn't remove the dandruff.

Having had my jaw, hair, stomach, feet, teeth, salary, voice, headache, house and incompetent car repair taxed, I decided to forego the dandruff tax for the time being, which must have sent shocks of despair through thousands of politicians all the way from Albany to Washington.

To raise their spirits, I drove to a filling station and said, "Fill her up," and they taxed my gasoline.

Afterwards I parked the car in the garage, and they taxed my parking space.

When I arrived home, the new chair we had bought had just been delivered. "Is there a sales tax?" I inquired. "Eight per cent" said the in-house accountant.

So I sat down, and they taxed my seat.

Picked up a book, and they taxed my mind.

Turned up the thermostat, and they taxed my heat.

I wanted to do something high-mindedly civic, and since it was getting quite dark, the task was easy. I could either sit there in my taxed seat and suffer dangerous eye-strain by reading my taxed book, or I could turn on the electric lamp and save my vision.

I turned on the lamp and they taxed my light.

I was profoundly moved by the thought of the vast sums of government revenue I was generating simply by sitting there with my eyes skimming the leisurely sentences of Henry James. Although scarcely moving a muscle, I was churning out vast sums of governmental wherewithal.

Governments were taxing my eyes, taxing my mind, taxing my seat, taxing my heat, taxing my headache and taxing the very house in which I was providing these lucrative services to government. And all the time, completely forgotten, my faithful car was sitting silently in its garage churning out new parking taxes for me to pay.

I felt so good about it that I rose and mixed a drink, and they taxed my gin.

And all the time the miracle of human biology was working away to insure that my usefulness would resume on the morrow.

Whiskers were silently growing to assure fresh payment of the beard tax next morning. Hair was toiling up out of the follicles to guarantee another barber-tax payment two weeks hence. Socks were slowly eroding to insure a constant outflux of foot-taxed payments.

The thought of it made me take three more gins quickly, and politicians smiled from coast to coast, knowing that in the morning they would rake in a surplus from the headache tax.

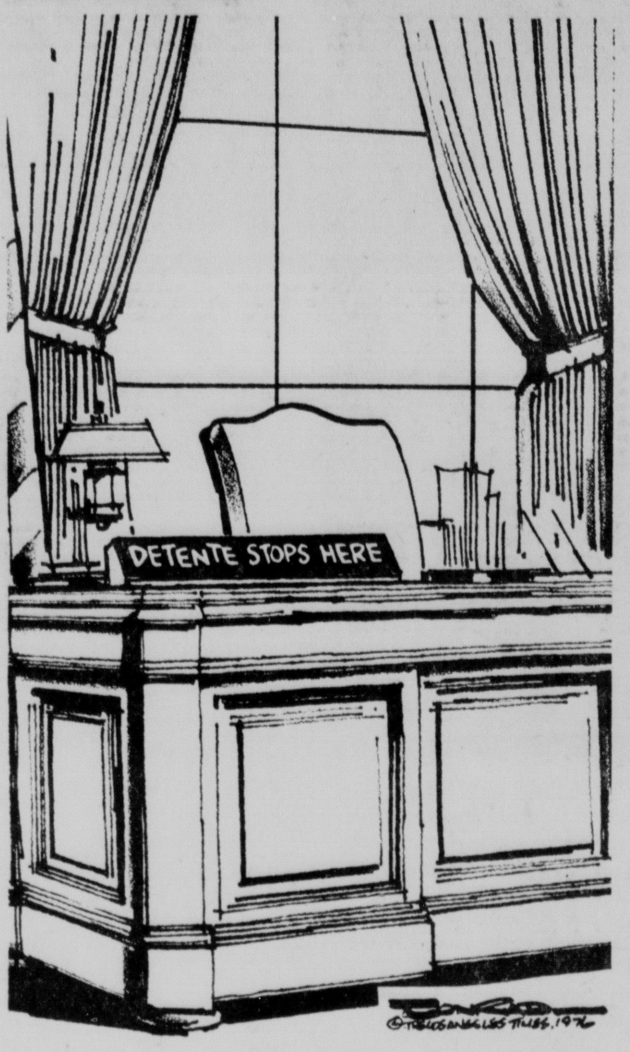
Cruise Missile And Backfire Bomber



©The Los Angeles Times, 1976

WASHINGTON — Having banished the word "detente" from his vocabulary in this year's political campaigning, President Ford has cast doubt on his earlier determination to conclude a new strategic arms limitation agreement with Moscow before the November elections. Nevertheless, negotiations are still under way. If they produce a new pact, it probably would be signed in Washington by Ford and Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The basic framework for a new agreement is the tentative accord reached by Ford and Brezhnev at Vladivostok in November, 1974. They agreed that the United States and the Soviet Union each could have no more than 2,400 "delivery vehicles" by 1985, with no more than 1,320 of these having multiple warheads. Kissinger described the Vladivostok accord as a "breakthrough" which would "mean that a cap has been put on the arms race" for a decade.

At the time, it was thought that a final agreement would be signed in the summer of 1975, during a Brezhnev visit to this country. But the negotiations bogged down, chiefly because of inability to agree on how to deal with two weapons systems: the U.S. cruise missile and the Soviet Backfire bomber.

The cruise missile is basically a pilotless jet drone that can be launched from the air, land, surface ships or submarines. "Guided by computers, the long-range, uncannily accurate missiles can cruise and maneuver in the earth's atmosphere like airplanes and can strike within 30 feet of their programmed targets," Business Week observed, "and they have the added advantage of working as well with conventional warheads as with nuclear warheads."

Although the cruise missile is still in the experimental stage, the United States is believed to be four to six years ahead of the Soviet Union in developing such a weapon. The first air-launched cruise missile test took place March 5 over the New Mexico desert, and six additional flights are planned between now and December.

Bombers, submarines and intercontinental ballistic missiles require large facilities which can easily be detected by reconaissance satellites, but cruise missiles do not. They can be hidden from view on submarines, surface vessels, aircraft, trains and motor vehicles. This is a major reason why the Soviet Union wants the United States to agree to limit their production.

For its part, the United States wants comparable restrictions on the Backfire bomber, which Moscow insists is a medium-range bomber designed for combat on the periphery of the Soviet Union. But some U.S. defense officials suspect the plane has intercontinental range and thus qualifies as a strategic weapon.

The question that U.S. and Soviet negotiators must resolve is whether cruise missiles and Backfires should be counted against the limit of 2,400 delivery vehicles agreed to at Vladivostok. The Ford administration reportedly is planning to offer a separate interim agreement covering cruise missiles.

The alternative to agreement almost certainly would be a costly new arms race. If both countries possessed large quantities of undetectable cruise missiles, each would suspect the other of having secretly armed all its large ships and aircraft with the weapons. The prospect should be troubling enough to serve as a major impetus toward a new strategic arms control pact.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — Here's St Patrick's Day again Though I'm tempted — I've saved up a whole envelope of Irish tales — I'll say no more about it

Except Irish curses They're handy and have excellent precedents

"It was St. Patrick himself cursed the man who stole his goat to use the skin for a drum," a man told me in Ennis It was in the bar in The Old Ground

"For the greatest effect of a curse, you must kneel on sharp stones,' said a man in Ballyvaughan at the edge of Galway Bay. (It was in the bar at Gregan's Castle, but there's a church just around the corner of the road)

"The longer you can stand the pain of the stones, the stronger the curse "

☆ ☆ ☆

'Once the curse is launched it cannot be recalled,' he said 'Like a gun, once you've pulled the trigger

'There was a bishop took exception to the folk at Lisdoonvarna near here on the edge of the Burren Dancing and taking to drink and God knows what else they were up to

"So in a moment of anger he cursed them But as the curse flew from his lips, God softened his heart And as swift as he could, he called to the curse to divert itself to a field of rushes nearby You cannot send a curse into thin air — there must be an object," he said

"In the nick of time, the curse diverted from the people of Lisdoonvarna and fell upon the rushes "

He took a long drink of Guinness "Look on the field yourself," he said "Forever as long as they've grown, those rushes have burnt tops"

☆ ☆ ☆

It was in the bar at Durty Nellie's Beside Bunratty Castle where the Norman conqueror de Clare had an O'Brien pulled apart by strong horses

It was in the bar but the land beside the Shannon's mouth is holy ground The Viking Danes left a prayer stone in Runic letters and you can see it today in the church at Killaloe

"It was close to here that Red Mary was cursed to her death," said the man in Durty Nellie's

"Red Mary who lived in Lemeneagh Castle and closed its gates against her wounded and dying husband 'We want no dead men here,' said Red Mary

"The second husband she pushed of the walls to his death,' he said cheerfully "But as he was a general of Cromwell's it was no loss "

☆ ☆ ☆

'Now about the curse," he said "Red Mary was riding down from Lemeneagh Castle to Limerick where Cromwell's generals had headquarters

"And on the way — about here — she saw a miserable hut owned by a widow woman And she told her soldiers 'The hut displeases me Tear it down '

Now the poor widow pleaded on her knees But Red Mary was heartless 'I don't want to see it when I come back this way.' And on she rode "

☆ ☆ ☆

'As she left, the widow let fly a terrible curse She cursed Red Mary root and branch That she and her family unto three generations (three's as far as the curse carries I don't know why) should die by fire and sword and free rope

"And as Red Mary rode back toward home — the hut being torn down — her scarf flew back in the wind It caught on a tree branch and the force of it broke Red Mary's neck!" (I told you I had an envelope full)

U.S. Signals Displeasure With Soviet Role In Angola

©The New York Times

Washington — Because of Soviet military involvement in Angola, the United States has decided not to participate for the time being in cabinet-level meetings of various Soviet-American joint commissions set up in recent years when detente was in vogue, State Department officials said Tuesday.

There are nine such commissions, but the decision has so far affected only three, those dealing in trade, housing and energy. The others were not due to meet until late in the year, and by then the United States might decide to participate, officials said.

Robert L. Funseth, the department spokesman, announced the decision on the trade, housing and energy commissions when he said Tuesday that "in light of the situation in Angola, we felt we could not conduct our business with Soviet Union as usual."

Action A Limited One

The Ford administrations action, however, was clearly a limited one and not meant to disrupt overall Soviet-American relations. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, repeated that the government's anger over Soviet involvement in Angola would not affect the strategic arms limitation talks and would not lead to any halt in the export of grain to the Soviet Union.

Funseth also disclosed that the negotiations that have been going on since Jan. 26 for a Soviet-American oil agreement had been recessed because of failure to agree on a formula for shipping rates on the oil that would be sold to the United States. But Funseth stressed that the oil talks were unrelated to the actions on the joint commissions.

Ever since the Soviet-backed Angolan forces acceded to power in the civil war there — with the help of 12,000 Cuban troops and some $200 million in Soviet military aid — the Ford administration has been seeking to send "signals" that this would harm Soviet relations with this country.

Since U.S. policies on detente with the Soviet Union have come under attack during the current political campaign, the administration has been cautious about its dealings with Russia.

Ford has said he prefers to avoid the word "detente" while nevertheless still pursuing better relations. This has led to an administration-wide circular, also sent to embassies overseas, advising that the word not be used by officials.

'Dual Policy' Support Wanted

Also, Kissinger has stepped up his verbal attacks on the Soviet Union without going so far as to repudiate his own policies. He has called for support of what he called again Tuesday the "dual policy" of trying to "firmly resist and deter adventurism" while keeping open "the possibility of more constructive relations" with Moscow.

Alluding to the various joint commissions set up as the result of former President Nixon's three summit meetings with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev in 1972, 1973 and 1974, Kissinger said the United States favored enlarging bilateral cooperation "when political conditions permit it."

Ironically, at the very moment when the administration was "signalling" its irritation with the Soviet Union, 10 senators from both parties introduced a resolution Tuesday supporting efforts to improve Soviet-American relations.

The resolution, the inspiration of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., was not solicited or discussed with the administration, Cranston said.

Among the sections of the resolution was one calling for a widening of relations in all spheres taking into account "the risks and advantages" of such ties.

The pro-detente resolution was ostensibly aimed at such critics of detente as Sen. Henry M. Jackson, the Democratic presidential contender from Washington. But it was so broadly written that Jackson announced Tuesday that he had decided to co-sponsor it.

U.S. To Seek Cut In Specialty Steel Imports

Washington (AP) — The Ford Administration said Tuesday it will seek to reduce imports of specialty steel through "orderly marketing agreements" rather than by the quota system recommended by the U.S. International Trade Commission.

By so doing, the administration was seeking a compromise between demands of the U.S. steel industry for help in reducing imports and the threat of retaliation by foreign nations if quotas are imposed.

Frederick Dent, the special U.S. trade representative, said the administration hopes to reach agreement with other nations to reduce U.S. imports of specialty steel to about 146,000 tons a year, the same level the trade commission recommended to accomplished through quotas.

Dent said if agreements cannot be achieved, President Ford will impose quotas by June 14 for a period of three years.

Mining In Space Technically Possible

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Miners of the future could dig for iron and nickel on the asteroids in space and supply the earth with metal for centuries to come, say scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mining in space is technically possible, the scientists say. Bringing it back would eliminate both the environmental problems of mining on earth and the possibility of confrontation with the nations that now control much of the planet's resources.

Thomas B. McCord, director of MIT's astrophysical observatory, and Michael J. Gaffey, a staff scientist at MIT, outlined the case for mining in space at the Lunar Science Conference held Tuesday in Houston.

"We have concluded that there exist significant economic, environmental and political incentives for the utilization of extraterrestrial resources and that no insurmountable technical problems exist to prevent such utilization," the scientists said in a paper delivered to the conference.

Using telescopes on earth, they say they have determined that some of the asteroids are composed largely of iron and nickel.

The asteroids are fragments, some the size of tiny planets, that orbit the sun in a belt between Mars and Jupiter.

The scientists estimate that a space mining venture could bring back metal each year worth at least $140 billion.

They envision thousands of workers located on the iron-rich asteroids, melting the metal into ingots in large solar furnaces. When the time was right, a rocket-powered tug would push 100 million tons of iron and nickel across the sky on a year-long journey toward earth orbit.

There, it would rendezvous with a large space factory colony that would melt the metal again, inject it with gas and form it into light, foamy bundles.

These, equipped with guidance computers, would then be ferried past the moon and sent streaming toward earth for a splashdown in the ocean.

The scientists estimate that one cubic kilometer of asteroid material could supply earth with enough iron for 15 years and enough nickel for 1,250 years.

At current prices, the haul would be worth $5 trillion.

©The New York Times

Washington — Because of Soviet military involvement in Angola, the United States has decided not to participate for the time being in cabinet-level meetings of various Soviet-American joint commissions set up in recent years when detente was in vogue, State Department officials said Tuesday.

There are nine such commissions, but the decision has so far affected only three, those dealing in trade, housing and energy. The others were not due to meet until late in the year, and by then the United States might decide to participate, officials said.

Robert L. Funseth, the department spokesman, announced the decision on the trade, housing and energy commissions when he said Tuesday that "in light of the situation in Angola, we felt we could not conduct our business with Soviet Union as usual."

Action A Limited One

The Ford administrations action, however, was clearly a limited one and not meant to disrupt overall Soviet-American relations. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, repeated that the government's anger over Soviet involvement in Angola would not affect the strategic arms limitation talks and would not lead to any halt in the export of grain to the Soviet Union.

Funseth also disclosed that the negotiations that have been going on since Jan. 26 for a Soviet-American oil agreement had been recessed because of failure to agree on a formula for shipping rates on the oil that would be sold to the United States. Scottsbluff Beet Growers Vote Against GWS Offer

Scottsbluff (AP) — Scottsbluff area beet growers Monday night backed their directors in rejecting a contract offer from Great Western Sugar Co. The vote was 447-3.

The directors of the Nebraska Non-Stock Beet Growers Association, along with leaders of grower associations in the other four Great Western Sugar Co. grower states, unanimously refused the company's proposed contract and broke off negotiations March 4.

Similar votes will be taken at three other Nebraska grower meetings this week.

The major points on which the company would not budge in its contract proposal are freight, purity, and extraction. Association leaders in Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas and Montana were united in their opposition.

"If we give in, growers outside of the Great Western production areas know they will face the same thing next year," Vernon Palser of Big Springs, president of the association, and Ray Linz of Lyman, association vice president, told the growers.

GWS proposes that it pay the first $1.75 per ton freight charge and growers pay the rest, which would amount to a total of $1,750,000 for growers.

GWS now pays $2.05 per ton freight and the growers propose that the company raise that to $2.25, whiih Palser said would cost the company $54,000.

GWS proposes to pay on a sugar extraction basis rather than on sugar content. Growers turned down that proposal, saying that they produce the sugar in the beets and it is not thrie fault if the company cannot extract the sugar.

GWS said it is extracting 16 pounds of sugar per ton less than in the 1966-68 period and has absorbed all the loss.

"We growers have absorbed our share of losses," Palser said. "They didn't pick up our losses when we were hit by hail or other setbacks. It is not appropriate for us to pick up the loss in their extraction."

Regarding purity, Palser said that during negotiations he asked GWS representatives if the chemicals the company recommends for growing beets has an effect on the purity and "they couldn't answer that."

Exhibition For Blind, Impaired Organized By NU Art Galleries

A second exhibition for the blind and visually impaired has been organized by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Art Galleries and will be presented in nine locations throughout Nebraska in 1976.

The exhibition, titled "The Human Landscape," will begin its statewide tour after concluding its current four-week showing in the First National Bank in Lincoln on April 9.

Locations at which the traveling exhibit has been scheduled through 1976 include:

The Bellevue Public Library, April 12-May 6.

The Edith Abbott Memorial Library, Grand Island, May 8 - June 3.

The Holdrege Public Library, June 5-July 1.

The McCook Public Library, July 3-July 29.

The North Platte Public Library, July 31-Aug. 26.

The Kimball Public Library, Aug. 28-Sept. 23.

The Scottsbluff Public Library, Sept. 25-October 21.

The Valentine Public Library, Oct. 23-Nov. 18.

The Morton James City Library, Nebraska City, Nov. 20-Dec. 16.

The exhibition, patterned after last year's "Quality of Touch" exhibition, includes interpretive material provided on large print labels and in two Braille catalogs. John Smith and Steve Speicher, both blind themselves, assited in the selection of the sculpture and approved the labeling information.

The theme of "The Human Landscape" is people, and it includes heads such as "The Portrait of John Marin," by Gaston Lachaise, depicting the qualitities of the human personality. The hills and valleys of the human geography are further explored in figures by sculptors who show people at work as in "Laborer" by Mahonri Young, and the actress "Florence Reed," by Ethel Myers. Randolph Johnson has made a forceful social comment about man's inhumanity to manin "The Five Who Escaped," while Michael Lekakis has carved a simple totem relating the power of the "Thunderbird" to man.

The traveling exhibition was organized by the NU Art Galleries with the cooperation of the Nebraska Library Commission, the Mary Riepma Fund, the Nebraska Art Association, the State Rehabilitation Services for the Visually Impaired and the First National Bank of Lincoln.

The program is jointly sponsored by a grant from the Nebraska Arts Council, a state agency, and the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency.

A piano teaching and metal crafts workshop will be among the workshop clinics.

Some new workshop seminars are three programs for high school athletic coaches. The athletic seminars include prevention and care of athletic injuries, scientific conditioning and football coaching, taught by NU football coach Tom Osborne.

License Plate Grace Period Officially Over

That two-week grace period for Lincoln motorists to obtain their 1976 license tags is officially over and police are issuing tickets to violators.

Although they're "not making any big production out of it," according to Capt. Cliff Koch, police are issuing the tickets as well as advising motorists that they must have the new plates on their cars before they drive on city streets.

ABP Reopens S. Omaha Plant

Omaha (AP) — American Beef Packers, Inc., plans to be operating its South Omaha plant at capacity by the end of the week, officials said Tuesday.

The plant reopened at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday for the first time since its closing Jan. 7, 1975, when the firm filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Resumption of operations went smoothly, said Don Carlson, plant manager. There were 160 employes at the plant Tuesday, considered a full work force. All of the employes worked for American Beef prior to the plant's closing.

Carlson said 537 head of cattle were to be slaughtered Tuesday, and about the same number Wednesday. The plant's 1,080-head capacity should be reached yet this week, he said.

The plant's reopening was assured Monday with completion of a trust agreement with the First National Bank of Omaha to protect feeders.

C.H. Foster, American Beef corporate secretary, said the agreement calls for American Beef to put up $900,000 to be held in trust by the bank for use if American Beef defaults on feeder payments. That amount is the equivalent of two days' cattle kill.

The South Omaha plant is the second American Beef plant to reopen since the bankruptcy. A plant in Oakland, Iowa, has been in operation since last year.

Foster said it isn't known when the firm's third remaining plant, a pork processing plant at Harlan, Iowa, will reopen. Three other plants have been sold.

Scottsbluff Beet Growers Vote Against GWS Offer

Scottsbluff (AP) — Scottsbluff area beet growers Monday night backed their directors in rejecting a contract offer from Great Western Sugar Co The vote was 447-3

The directors of the Nebraska Non-Stock Beet Growers Association, along with leaders of grower associations in the other four Great Western Sugar Co grower states, unanimously refused the company's proposed contract and broke off negotiations March 4

Similar votes will be taken at three other Nebraska grower meetings this week

The major points on which the company would not budge in its contract proposal are freight, purity, and extraction Association leaders in Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas and Montana were united in their opposition

"If we give in, growers outside of the Great Western production areas know they will face the same thing next year," Vernon Palser of Big Springs, president of the association, and Ray Linz of Lyman, association vice president, told the growers

GWS proposes that it pay the first $1 75 per ton freight charge and growers pay the rest, which would amount to a total of $1,750,000 for growers

GWS now pays $2 05 per ton freight and the growers propose that the company raise that to $2 25, which Palser said would cost the company $54,000.

GWS proposes to pay on a sugar extraction basis rather than on sugar content Growers turned down that proposal, saying that they produce the sugar in the beets and it is not thrie fault if the company cannot extract the sugar

GWS said it is extracting 16 pounds of sugar per ton less than in the 1966-68 period and has absorbed all the loss

"We growers have absorbed our share of losses," Palser said "They didn't pick up our losses when we were hit by hail or other setbacks It is not appropriate for us to pick up the loss in their extraction '

Regarding purity, Palser said that during negotiations he asked GWS representatives if the chemicals the company recommends for growing beets has an effect on the purity and "they couldn't answer that "

Boys Town Worth $242 Million

Boys Town (AP) — Boys Town, the "City of Little Men," reported Tuesday it has total assets of $242,102,166, up sharply from the $191.4 million net worth which was disclosed in a Pulitzer prize-winning story in 1972.

The Sun Newspapers of Omaha, a suburban weekly newspaper group, won the prize when it disclosed the wealth of the private Roman Catholic institution which then had an enrollment averaging 695 boys.

Now the enrollment on the campus on the western edge of Omaha totals 398 boys, making the institution's assets worth more than $608,000 per boy.

Edwin J. Hewitt, deputy director of administration, said an audit statement shows that while Boys Town's endowment fund investments dropped during 1975, total assets rose from $238,110,951 as of Dec. 31, 1974, to $242,102,166 as of Dec. 31, 1975. Included in the total assets is the increased value of buildings and improvements due to extensive construction last year.

The board of directors, which met Monday, was told income from mail appeals and bequests was down from $10,923,098 in 1974 to $9,956,095 in 1975. Investment and other income also was down substantially, officials said.

Total 1975 revenues were $1,195,882 less than in 1974, while operating expenditures climbed from $16,477,741 in 1974 to $18,315,961.

The audit statements presented to the board showed a total of $12,961,475 in 1975 expenditures on capital construction, including $7,468,097 for the Boys Town Institute for Communication Disorders in Children; $2,113,832 for the Boys Town Center for the Study of Youth Development, and $3,379,546 for construction projects on the Boys Town campus.

The campus projects included 13 new cottages, the Father Flanagan Shrine on the Dowd Memorial Chapel, restoration of Father Flanagan Alumni House and Museum, renovation of the Visitor's Center and other work.

The various construction projects, along with the institute and Boys Town centers, were begun after the 1972 disclosures of Boys Town's wealth.

The audit said the 1975 obligations were met by a sum of $8,807,814 taken from the Father Flanagan Endowment Fund and $4,153,661 from contributions during the year. The Endowment Fund was reduced from $202,241,396 on Dec. 31, 1974, to $194,135,821 on Dec. 31, 1975.

Hewitt said such sizeable expenditures will occur in each of the next several years.

He noted the Boys Town Institute and Boys Town Center have 25-year commitments.

Wagon Train Family Travels State In Cross-Country Trek

Kearney (AP) — An eight-member Blaine, Wash., family says it hopes to reach Valley Forge, Pa., with its private wagon train by July 4.

The Jim Jollo family started their cross-country trek with two covered wagons, four horses, a two-ton truck and a house trailer last June. Thus far, they have traveled in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming and Nebraska.

The family spent Monday night at Kearney, reached Shelton Tuesday and planned to get to Grand Island on Wednesday.

Linda Jollo, 18, one of the six children in the family, said the Jollos cover 20 to 25 miles per day and try to spend nights and weekends in or near towns so they can do their laundry, make purchases and whatever repairs are needed.

"We've had breakdowns and wagons hanging over cliffs" during the journay, Linda said. "People are most interesting because you get the local history from them. They're real interested. A lot of them are envious and it's real nice talking to them."

The Jollo family wagon train will head from Nebraska to Des Moines, Iowa, where they join the Iowa wagon train for the remainder of the eastward trek.

Mrs. Jollo said the family trip is independently financed.

Her husband, Jim, said the support of the family is dependant on his horseshoeing.

"I hope to shoe enough horses to pay our way down. I depend solely on horeshoeing for my living," he said.

Iowa Beef Plant Accident Claims Sioux City Man

Dakota City (UPI) — A young Sioux City, Iowa, resident was killed Tuesday in an industrial accident at the Iowa Beef Processors plant in Dakota City.

Dakota County Coroner Don Fitch said the victim, Charles Woodward, 20, reached into a conveyor to "get ahold of something and was drawn into the conveyor belt."

Fitch said Woodward, a member of the plant's cleanup crew, was dead at the scene.

The incident occurred in the plant's middle meat operation area.

Fontenelle Will Not Be Torn Down

Omaha (AP) — The prospective buyers of the Fontenelle Hotel have decided to renovate the building rather than demolish it.

James Putnam, a partner in the group negotiating the purchase, said the tentative plan now is to spend about $5 million for renovation.

A study by landmarks, Inc., is what caused the change of plans, Putnam said. "It showed us there's a lot more usable space in the building than what we had thought," he said.

The old hotel probably would be used for offices, Putnam said. He said he expects the purchase of the vacant downtown hotel from its New York owners to be completed in about a month.

Putnam said his group, which includes former Mayor Eugene Leahy, may take protective measures suggested last week by Landmarks to the City Council.

Landmarks, a nonprofit organization, asked the council to spend about $7,000 on such things as a covered walkway next to the hotel to protect pedestrians from the possibility of a falling brick. Putnam said his group may take such steps within two weeks.

Landmarks wants to save the building because of its historical and architectural signifiicance.

Broken Bow, Loup City Clinic Agreement Set

By United Press International

The Mid-Nebraska Community Mental Health Center board of directors has approved a satellite clinic affiliation agreement.

The agreement, which covers clinics in Broken Bow and Loup City, was required before more federal funding could be approved.

Five members of the Loup City clinic attended a board meeting Tonday night in Grand Island to discuss costs of the arrangement as well as insurance for their facility.

The Loup City representatives were not sure their director is insured against any malpractice situation which might arise.

The clinic also plans to have "outreach" facilities at Ord. Dr. Tom Searson of Grand Island, Mid-Nebraska director, said his main concern was how the expansion would affect maintenance of a good financial standing within the area.

In other action, the board allowed Central Nebraska Community Technical College of Hastings to use the Grand Island center for an alcoholism treatment course which would involve court referrals and the general public. The 10-week course will start Thursday.

The county attorney has ruled the death accidental.

Boys Town Worth $242 Million

Boys Town (AP) — Boys Town, the "City of Little Men." reported Tuesday it has total assets of $242,102,166, up sharply from the $191 4 million net worth which was disclosed in a Pulitzer prize-winning story in 1972

The Sun Newspapers of Omaha, a suburban weekly newspaper group, won the prize when it disclosed the wealth of the private Roman Catholic institution which then had an enrollment averaging 695 boys

Now the enrollment on the campus on the western edge of Omaha totals 398 boys making the institution s assets worth more than $608 000 per boy

Edwin J Hewitt deputy director of administration said an audit statement shows that while Boys Town s endowment fund investments dropped during 1975 total assets rose from $238 110 951 as of Dec 31 1974 to $242,102 166 as of Dec 31 1975 Included in the total assets is the increased value of buildings and improvements due to extensive construction last year

The board of directors which met Monday was told income from mail appeals and bequests was down from $10,923,098 in 1974 to $9,956 095 in 1975 Investment and other income also was down substantially, officials said

Total 1975 revenues were $1 195,882 less than in 1974 while operating expenditures climbed from $16,477 741 in 1974 to $18,315 961

The audit statements presented to the board showed a total of $12 961 475 in 1975 expenditures on capital construction, including $7 468 097 for the Boys Town Institute for Communication Disorders in Children $2 113 832 for the Boys Town Center for the Study of Youth Development and $3 379 546 for construction projects on the Boys Town campus

The campus projects included 13 new cottages, the Father Flanagan Shrine on the Dowd Memorial Chapel, restoration of Father Flanagan Alumni House and Museum, renovation of the Visitor's Center and other work

The various construction projects, along with the institute and Boys Town centers, were begun after the 1972 disclosures of Boys Town s wealth

The audit said the 1975 obligations were met by a sum of $8 807,814 taken from the Father Flanagan Endowment Fund and $4 153 661 from contributions during the year The Endowment Fund was reduced from $202 241 398 on Dec 31, 1974, to $194,135,821 on Dec 31, 1975

Hewitt said such sizeable expenditures will occur in each of the next several years

He noted the Boys Town Institute and Boys Town Center have 25-year commitments

Fontenelle Will Not Be Torn Down

Omaha (AP) — The prospective buyers of the Fontenelle Hotel have decided to renovate the building rather than demolish it

James Putnam, a partner in the group negotiating the purchase, said the tentative plan now is to spend about $5 million for renovation

A study by landmarks, Inc , is what caused the change of plans, Putnam said "It showed us there's a lot more usable space in the building than what we had thought," he said

The old hotel probably would be used for offices, Putnam said He said he expects the purchase of the vacant downtown hotel from its New York owners to be completed in about a month

Putnam said his group, which includes former Mayor Eugene Leahy, may take protective measures suggested last week by Landmarks to the City Council

Landmarks, a nonprofit organization, asked the council to spend about $7,000 on such things as a covered walkway next to the hotel to protect pedestrians from the possibility of a falling brick Putnam said his group may take such steps within two weeks

Landmarks wants to save the building because of its historical and architectural signifucance

Fairbury Center Project Okayed

. . . SeTech Wants Study

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

A Fairbury City Council proposal to build a community center on Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College campus land won a cautious go-ahead but not final approval from the college board Tuesday.

Board members voted unanimously to authorize its Fairbury campus student center study group to work with the city council, public schools, architects and SeTech students to determine the project's feasibility.

Coincidentally, the board last month authorized building plans to be drawn up for the student center, to be paid by a student fund now containing more than $58,000.

Architect Ken Clark of Lincoln told the board Tuesday the two centers could be built adjacent to each other in an integrated concept. On behalf of the Fairbury City Council, Clark sought approval to proceed with a plan to locate the community center on the southwest corner of the SeTech campus, replacing "obsolete" buildings.

The community building, for which federal funds have been allocated, would house a recreation area, indoor swimming pool, senior citizen and youth activity areas, and meeting rooms. Completion date would be August 1978.

When SeTech Area President Robert S. Eicher said Fairbury students might not want to wait, Clark said he hadn't polled them. But since the student center could be limited by its building fund sum, Clark pointed out integrating, lighting and utility systems of the two structures could cut costs and get students more for their money.

Fairbury campus Director Eugene Marcy, however, said "I really question tying up college land for a covered swimming pool." He said the community center "doesn't solve" the campus need for a drama theatre and physical education facilities.

Dr. Marcy said the original concept in the community's proposal changed from including a gymnasium and theatre, because of federal requirements attached to the money.

Board member G. Alan Dunlap of Milford said if SeTech were to give up part of its land for the civic center, that would provide the college with a "bargaining" tool for gym use if the public schools decide to build a new junior or senior high.

Lincolnite Don Nielsen said he's afraid the student fund is insufficient to build a center compatible physically with the proposed community building. Clark agreed.

Ted Doyle of Fairbury said the student union "could be designed to fit in fairly well." He said students are still analyzing costs for the 50-foot by 75-foot metal building with brick facing and veneer, and their report isn't yet complete.

Nielsen said any project must benefit both the city and campus. Board attorney Doug Curry of Lincoln said SeTech should get some benefit for giving up any land.

In Milford campus business, the board unanimously agreed to study plans for a women's dormitory and recommend a site at the April meeting. Women now have no on-campus quarters.

President Eicher proposed that Milford building construction technology students do the work, which could be complete by January 1977. The single unit with eight bedrooms and brick veneer could serve married students, if women students don t fill it.

Eicher said bond payments on the Milford men's dorm are four years ahead of schedule and could be paid off by mid-1977. He said the bond administrator thus agreed to permit a $90,000 loan on the current bond for the women's housing.

No SeTech building or operational funds would be used, Eicher said.

Festival Ordinance Deemed 'Too Strict'

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

A proposed ordinance which sets out rules for gatherings of more than 500 people "is a little too strict for Lancaster County," said County Commissioner Bruce Hamilton.

The ordinance, now on its way through City Council, is an attempt to regulate gatherings such as music festivals, but also would include church revival meetings.

The County Board, which had several requests for music festivals last summer, would like to pass standards similar to the city's for the sake of consistency.

But the proposed ordinance would have to be changed before Hamilton will vote for it, he said.

"Are we making these rules to protect people or to discourage gatherings?" Hamilton asked.

Football Games Exempt

The city ordinance would exclude gatherings of less than 500 people and less than three hours duration. The three-hour limitation was an attempt to exempt Wesleyan University from having to get a permit for every football game, said Dennis Grams of the County-City Health Department.

Any government-sponsored gathering or those held on government-owned property, including Nebraska football games, also would be exempt.

The proposed ordinance sets up sanitary and safety conditions plus noise levels.

It also makes the permit holder responsible for seeing there are no alcoholic beverages or narcotics at the gathering.

"What you are doing is putting in a rule that nobody is going to follow," said Hamilton about the no-alcohol provision.

"I've never been to any festival that there hasn't been a lot of what you're trying to prevent," he said.

Adult Along

The ordinance requires that children under 12 be accompanied by an adult.

Mass gatherings could be held no more than 12 hours in any day and not between midnight and 8 a.m., according to the current proposal.

This would rule out any two- or three-day festivals, Hamilton pointed out.

"I have a lot of questions on this for the city," said Hamilton. The two governments are expected to discuss the mass gathering standards at a joint meeting next Monday.

Three individuals have already inquired about the process for getting an amusement license for a music festival, according to Nancy Howland, secretary to the county clerk.

Last year the board was unprepared when the first request for a music festival came up. The details for sanitation, hours and safety had to be ironed out temporarily.

Reimbursement Of Embezzled Money Made

The county has been reimbursed for the money found missing from the Lancaster County Motor Vehicle Department.

The bonding company late last week made a $7,407 restitution on the bond claim of Darrell Blank, said County Treasurer Frank Golden.

In late January, a jury found Blank guilty of embezzling $5,045 from the county motor vehicle department.

Blank, former chief of the division, had been charged with embezzling $7,407. The shortage was discovered in 1974 during a special audit of the treasurer's office by a state auditing team.

Fund Drive Nets $158,000 For Ashland Health Clinic

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Ashland — Fourteen weeks and $158,000 later, Ashland has enough money to build the first health clinic in its history.

"We're still in a state of shock around here," said Barb Froistad, secretary for the fund drive.

George Spargen, chairman of the Ashland Community Medical Fund Inc., said Tuesday the goal of $150,000 was surpassed with donations coming from within a 20-mile radius of the Saunders County community.

The plans for the Ashland Care Clinic were drawn by William Fry of Omaha and include facilities for four doctors, two dentists and an optometrist.

Spargen said bids for the complex will be let within two weeks and hopes are that it can be finished by late fall.

It is hoped that $150,000 will pay for the basic clinic, but Spargen said donations are still being accepted in hopes of turning the basement into a civic center.

"Eventually, when everything is completed, we hope to have a community meeting room," he said. "We don't have one other than the Legion."

Spargen said about 10 major contributors, gave about $5,000 each to the project and roughly 300 contributors in all.

"I think the people around here realize that we're in dire need of medical facilities," he said.

Since the medical fund is a non-profit organization, Spargen said eventual profits from the clinic will be put back into the communities which helped support it.

"The money accumulated after the building is paid for will go into Ashland community projects and surrounding community projects, like in Greenwood, which helped out quite a bit," he said.

The clinic received a big boost from Joe Uhrig, a professional fund raiser who donated his time, and from William Sapp, campaign chairman, according to Spargen.

It is hoped the two Vietnamese physicians, whom the town is sponsoring, will use the facilities, but Spargen said organizers will also actively seek other doctors to staff the clinic.

"This was done mostly door-to-door," Spargen said. "We have a real good community with fine people. A lot of people thought it couldn't be done, but it was."

Lincolnite Considered For FDIC Board Post

Washington (AP) — Members of the Senate Banking Committee were being polled Tuesday on whether they would approve the nomination of Robert E. Barnett to be a member of the board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Barnett of Lincoln, Neb., has been serving as deputy to the chairman, Frank Willie, who is leaving the FDIC.

A staff member of the banking committee said that members absent Monday when the panel met on President Ford's nomination were being asked whether they favored reporting the nomination to the Senate floor for a confirmation vote.

The staff member did not know how long the polling would take nor when the nomination might go to the floor.

During the hearing Monday, Barnett said in response to questions by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., committee chairman, that he is not satisfied with the record of the federal government in uncovering discrimination in bank lending practices.

"I like the idea of a task force" to probe for discrimination in loan making Barnett said.

"We haven't really uncovered the abuses that are there," he said.

He also said he would support a requirement that banks deep a record of loans made to minorities.

Barnett also said the FDIC has created a consumer affair office for handling consumer complaints against banks.

Asked whether he thought too much money was being concentrated in a few banks, Barnett said he has seen nothing which would indicate that.

Asked whether he would favor more banks to promote a more competitive banking atmosphere, Barnett said he supports keen competition between banks but he said he was afraid that too many banks could lead to frequent bank failures.

As for Barnett's nomination, Proxmire said he felt Ford should be "commended" for picking Barnett.

Lincolnite Considered For FDIC Board Post

Washington (AP) — Members of the Senate Banking Committee were being polled Tuesday on whether they would approve the nomination of Robert E. Barnett to be a member of the board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Barnett of Lincoln, Neb., has been serving as deputy to the chairman, Frank Willie, who is leaving the FDIC.

A staff member of the banking committee said that members absent Monday when the panel met on President Ford's nomination were being asked whether they favored reporting the nomination to the Senate floor for a confirmation vote.

The staff member did not know how long the polling would take nor when the nomination might go to the floor.

During the hearing Monday, Barnett said in response to questions by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., committee chairman, that he is not satisfied with the record of the federal government in uncovering discrimination in bank lending practices.

"I like the idea of a task force" to probe for discrimination in loan making Barnett said.

"We haven't really uncovered the abuses that are there," he said.

He also said he would support a requirement that banks deep a record of loans made to minorities.

Barnett also said the FDIC has created a consumer affair office for handling consumer complaints against banks.

Asked whether he thought too much money was being concentrated in a few banks, Barnett said he has seen nothing which would indicate that.

Asked whether he would favor more banks to promote a more competitive banking atmosphere, Barnett said he supports keen competition between banks but he said he was afraid that too many banks could lead to frequent bank failures.

As for Barnett's nomination, Proxmire said he felt Ford should be "commended" for picking Barnett.

Santa Fe Rail Service Back

Chicago (AP) — A strike by the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks against the Santa Fe Railway lasted several hours Tuesday before a tentative agreement was reached.

The union's 8,000 members were called off their jobs at dawn in a dispute over proposed contract changes. But shortly after noon a railroad spokesman said pickets would be withdrawn and service restored.

About a month and a half ago I enrolled in the Iowa Speed Reading Course and deposited $59.50. At the time I was told the fee was refundable. Then, unable to go on with the course, I requested my deposit be refunded. I have not heard from the company after several letters. Please help.

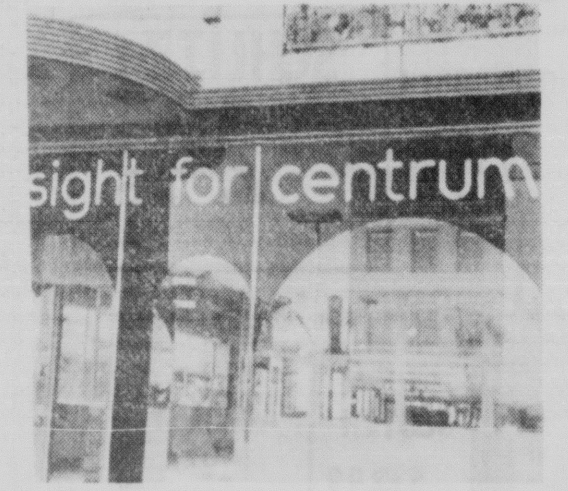
The company recently moved from the address you listed in your letter to ACTION LINE. A representative asks that you send a letter to U.S. Reading Lab at 609 West 2nd Street, Roswell, New Mexico, 88201. She said you are entitled to a full refund if you didn't attend any classes and asks that you include the reasons you had to drop from the course and whether you attended any classes or not.

Spelling Bee

Whenever I go by the old Kresge building I see the large lettered sign "Sight for Centrum." Shouldn't it read "Site for Centrum?"

—J.C., Lincoln



ACTION LINE: Your sight is correct according to a representative from the City Planning Dept. The sign is a play on words designed to create interest says the Planning Dept. spokesman. In the windows of the Kresge building are several visual representations of what the Centrum will look like once it is built, therefore they chose to use the "sight" spelling.

Irish Coffee Invented By Hung Over Barman

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Thirty years ago this St. Patrick's Day a barman at Shannon Airport seeking "the cure" — Irish for driving out the shakes of a hangover — sloshed some whisky into his morning coffee, topped it off with a glob of cream and voila! (French for begorrah) inadvertently invented Irish coffee.

Or was it an Irish bartender similarly afflicted in a San Francisco tavern?

Although they agree on the date, the savants are divided on the actual site of the miracle. But this much is certain: The resulting nostrum not only kept the poor man's head from exploding but proved the biggest boom to the sale of Irish whisky since the holy monks emerged from their cellar with the formula for the blessed stuff back in the Dark Ages.

Since that miraculous March morning in 1946, annual exports of Irish whisky have multiplied five-fold and are now in the neighborhood of 300,000 cases, which happens to be in the same neighborhood as the attendance at the St. Patrick's Day parade in New York.

Whole sections of the New York parade have been known to defect down the side streets of Fifth Avenue to hospices with names like "Mulligan's," "Gallagher's" and "Shamrock Inn" for a swig of the velvety, cream-topped curative as concocted by angels of mercy with names like Paddy, Desmond and Solly.

Irish coffee, according to Dubliner Martin Bolger, who has been dispensing the drink almost since its creation, "is the triumph of specific gravity over broken glass, done with skill, love and a good deal of luck."

The skill involves keeping the glass from breaking at the first infusion of the scalding black coffee and keeping the cream from sinking so its sits on top in a three-quarter-inch band.

Women, Lemonade Study Hit

(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — A $46,100 Federal grant was used to study the effect of scantily clad women on male drivers, and the use of lemonade to soothe people in a hot room.

The study, designed to produce new information about "Environmental Determinants of Human Aggression," produced the finding that male drivers smile at a young woman attired in a halter and short shorts, watch her walk down the street, and sometimes whistle or make sexually-oriented comments.

Funds for the study came from the National Science Foundation (NSF). The research was carried out by Dr. Robert A. Baron.

The disclosures were made by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who said the research was "contrived." He gave the project his monthly Golden Fleece award for an example of government waste, the third such example he has discovered among grants made by the NSF.

The NSF is spending $546 million to finance outside research in fiscal 1976, and the agency is seeking $620 million more for similar outlays in fiscal 1977.

Proxmire said Baron conducted his experiments in West Lafayette, Ind. He said Baron's assistant would pull his car to a stop at a red light. When the light turned green, the assistant would refuse to move his car for 15 seconds to determine when and how often the driver immediately behind would become impatient and aggressive enough to honk his horn.

"In order to see if 'environmental determinants' such as sexual arousal, humor and empathy reduced 'human aggression' in the form of horn honking, Baron had a young woman walk past the stopped driver in a variety of costumes," Proxmire said.

To test sexual arousal, the woman dressed in short shorts and a halter. For humor, she wore a clown mask. For empathy, she hobbled on crutches and wore a bandage on her left leg.

Later, Proxmire said, Baron made further experiments to determine that people placed n a hot room become aggressive unless cooled by a drink of iced lemonade.

"While this piece of contrived research may appear ridiculous to most American taxpayers," Proxmire said, "the NSF officials who authorized spending $46,100 on this project must have had something like the following in mind: to reduce the tension and aggression of drivers caught in the middle of traffic jams, the foundation seems to tell us we should organize thousands of bikini-wearing young women, clowns and women with broken legs to strut, dance and stagger across the streets at every busy intersection in every big city in every rush hour from now on."

Library Services Study Sought

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of three articles on the change that would be wrought by a bill before a committee of the Legislature.)

By MAX HOLLAND and JIM CAMDEN
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature now has a chance to ponder the issues raised by LB661, the bill that would move the state library for the blind from the Nebraska Library Commission to Services for the Visually Impaired.

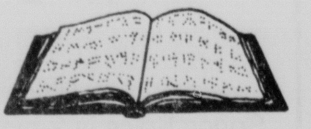
LB661's sponsor, Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston, Tuesday introduced a resolution for an interim study of the library services because he said the bill would never get out of committee. The bill has languished in the Unicameral's Government Committee since late January.

Koch now hopes to get a panel to study the library services to see if the move should be made and how services can be improved.

He introduced LB661 because he "felt that the commission needed to be challenged," Koch said. He said he intended to "shake up the library service to get it moving."

An interim study is agreeable to both the Nebraska chapter of the National Federation of the Blind, the main proponent of LB661, and the library commission, which opposed it.

In fact, library commission director Jane Geske called for an interim study when committee hearings on the bill were held in January. She said the bill came as a complete surprise to her and the library staff — they first learned about it from a newspaper article. But she has come to believe that introducing the bill was a positive step if it will eventually lead to better library services for the blind and physically handicapped.



"Let's use it to get a stronger program. Let's make sure, regardless of where the service is in five years, that it will be the best," she said.

The fact that the bill came as a surprise to the library commission led to an extraordinary episode.

Back in January, when the bill's future was still in doubt, the library commission allowed a professional librarians' association to use the library's mailing list of patrons. The Nebraska Library Association sent out a letter opposed to the bill and asked library patrons to contact their senators. A copy of the bill was enclosed.

Under an act of Congress, all matter specifically directed to visually handicapped persons can be mailed free. This privilege is of the utmost importance to the visually handicapped, who use and depend on postal services greatly. For example, 95% of the library loans to the visually handicapped in Nebraska are conducted through the mail.

The letter sent out by the librarians' association took advantage of this privilege, but violated postal service regulations which require such matter to be printed in extra-large type. Postal service inspectors are now investigating the incident, and the librarians may be fined $300 and the postage due.

When federation members received the librarians' letter, they also drafted a letter — in the proper type size — and asked Mrs. Geske for access to the library mailing list.

Mrs. Geske said she refused for two reasons. First, she said the federation's side had already been presented since a copy of the bill was enclosed with the librarians' letter. Second, she said the federation letter was simply a "diatribe" against the library staff, and she would only let federation members use the mailing list if a positive letter, which told why the library would be better off in the other state agency, was written.

Her refusal evoked a bitter reaction from federation members who accused her of "blatant censorship."

Whether or not Mrs. Geske was acting as a censor, she did have a point. Neither the federation or Services for the Visually Impaired (SVI), which stood to inherit the library, ever presented concrete, specific plans for improving library services, even though the bill would have become effective July 1.

"What is the program going to be and how will they do it?" Mrs. Geske asked. Will the library be better simply because they say so?

Dr. James Nyman, SVI director, replies to this criticism by saying it would have been useless to make specific plans.

"I can't take up my time or anyone else's time making plans for something that may or may not come about," he said.

Nevertheless, this has not stopped many SVI staff members from speaking out on behalf of the bill. This has occurred because many of them play a dual role — they work at SVI and are members of the Federation of the Blind.

The result has been that, despite Nyman's assertion that his agency is impartial, confusion exists over the SVI position on the bill. In at least one community, the impression is that SVI openly supports LB661.

Two SVI staff members spoke at a meeting of a newly formed federation group in Hastings, and encouraged the members to write letters to state senators. Barbara Roberts, a staff member who spoke there, said she made a "a very conscious attempt" to distinguish between her advocacy as a federation member and her neutrality as an SVI staffer.

But Doren Oltman, the local federation president, said he thought SVI supports the bill after listening to Miss Roberts.

In another incident, Miss Roberts allegedly offered a Hastings librarian a job with SVI if the bill passed.

Brenda Bostock, librarian in the blind materials section, said "She (Roberts) was in pressuring me to support the bill. She gave me the impression that I would have a job with them."

Miss Roberts denies this, and adds that she has no authority to hire or fire SVI staff members.

It seems then that Sen. Koch got his wish to "shake up the library services." His bill created a stir not only in the library commission, but in the Federation of the Blind, SVI and blind persons throughout the state.

LB661, the short and "simple" bill, did not lead a quiet life. The interim study Koch proposes will mollify both sides, at least temporarily.

But the issue which prompted LB661 is far from settled.

Audit Says State Payments To Nursing Homes Enough

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A state-sponsored audit of nursing home costs suggests the state ceiling on payments to nursing homes for Medicaid recipients is sufficient to meet nursing homes' expenses.

The nursing home industry has asked the State Department of Public Welfare to increase the maximum because the nursing homes say they are losing money on Medicaid patients.

Don Leuenberger, a budget analyst who coordinated the audit, said nursing homes may in fact be losing money on Medicaid patients where counties have authorized payments less than the state ceiling.

The state welfare program is administered at the county level. County welfare departments negotiate the actual amount paid nursing homes for caring for Medicaid patients.

Guidelines Set

The state allows the counties to spend no more than $12.10-$13.97 per day for a Medicaid patient, depending on the type of care needed.

The audit revealed 12 non - government - affiliated nursing homes experienced a $12.80 average daily cost for each patient. Leuenberger noted that figure is within the maximum.

However, the audit also showed the non-government nursing homes received an average payment of $11.77 for welfare patients. That means the homes were losing $1.03 a day for every Medicaid patient.

The nursing homes had asked the state to raise the maximum payment to $16.18.

On the average, he said, the study justifies some increase in the payments negotiated by the counties with the nursing homes.

Maximum Reached

County commsisioners in Douglas and Lancaster Counties have set Medicaid payments at the maximum allowed by the state, he said.

Medicaid is funded jointly by the federal government, the state and the county. Leuenberger said recipients generally pay up to 20% of the authorized rate.

Roughly $26 million is spent annually in Nebraska on Medicaid.

The State Welfare Department is presently devising a new plan, scheduled to go into effect July 1, basing Medicaid on cost-related factors.

Options Noted

Leuenberger said, "That doesn't mean we will pay everybody's cost whatever that might be. We have the option of basing costs on an average rate and pay costs up to and including that rate."

The audit also turned up some other "surprising" facts about Medicaid, he said. One is that private nursing homes have a higher percentage of their patients on welfare than government-operated nursing homes.

In addition, the amount of nursing care per patient in a non-government nursing home is only slightly greater than that provided in public homes.

Administration costs for non-government nursing homes, however, are considerably higher than public homes, the audit indicated.

Leuenberger said the audit also surprised him in that it indicated, "There doesn't seem to be much in the way of economy of scale with larger nursing homes."

Nick Bashara, Member Of LES Board Resigns

Acting City Council Chairman Dick Baker said the council will meet with the mayor next week to find a replacement for Nick Bashara who has resigned from the Lincoln Electric System Administrative Board.

Bashara, an outspoken member of the LES Board, said Tuesday he resigned because he needs to spend more time on his university research.

Bashara said his resignation had nothing to do with past controversies surrounding LES. At one time, he threatened to quit when the City Council and board were at odds over several issues.

Bashara, a research professor and professor of electrical engineering at the University of Nebraska, said, "I have just too many things to do."

Work on the LES Board is increasing, he added, and said he is on a leave of absence from the university to finish some work. He said he won't have the time to devote to LES.

His term on the board would have expired in December. Mayor Helen Boosalis will name a replacement, with approval from the City Council.

Bashara, who was named to the former Power Advisory Board in 1968, said LES "has come a long way the eight years I've been on the board."

Chico And The Man Nelson Feature

Nelson residents are used to the sight of Joe Mazour, 76, and his pet rooster, gadding through town on Mazour's gasoline-powered bicycle. The retired farmer says Chico, a California White chicken, remains on the bicycle perch while Mazour pedals about town.

Restaurant In Airport Said $24,000 In Hole

The restaurant in Lincoln's new airport terminal is $24,000 in the hole, it was announced Tuesday at the Lincoln Airport Authority Board meeting.

The restaurant, Clark's Compass Room, has been for sale for several months.

Because of the money owed the authority, the board voted to have the restaurant, operated by Joe and John Clark, declared to be in default of its contract.

In other action, board member Joe Hampton urged the board to strongly oppose developments of the Highlands housing addition in northwest Lincoln near the terminal.

Hampton said the authority should supply local leaders with material showing what happened in other areas when housing was constructed under the flight patterns of airliners.

In city after city, Hampton said after the meeting, governments are buying back homes built under flight patterns as an alternative to paying heavy damages in law suits.

Under a U.S. Supreme Court ruling, cities become liable for damages when air traffic at the airports increase, Hampton said, and he expects air travel to increase in Lincoln.

The City Council, the County Board, Mayor Helen Boosalis and the City Planning Dept. are planning a meeting on the potential noise pollution from the airliners at 4 p.m. Friday.

The board was also told by Air Wisconsin that it will drop one inbound and one outbound flight daily. That leaves the airline with flights leaving Lincoln to Minneapolis-St. Paul at 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. and flights leaving the Twin Cities for Lincoln at 3:50 and 7:40 p.m.

Frontier Airlines told the board that starting June 1 it will have 6:20 a.m. and 2:22 p.m. flights leaving for Dallas. Flights to Lincoln will leave from Dallas at 11:28 a.m. and 8:42 p.m.

The flights include stops at Omaha and Kansas City.

Energy-Saving Products Popular

New York (UPI) — Energy-saving products, security devices and lawn and garden equipment were popular with buyers at the Mid-America Hardgoods Trade Show in Columbus, Ohio.

A trade paper, "Home Furnishings Daily," said greater interest than usual was expressed in woodburning metal fireplaces and devices to capture more heat from fireplaces. An Ohio buyer said his customers began asking for garden seeds the day after Christmas.

Audit Says State Payments To Nursing Homes Enough

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A state-sponsored audit of nursing home costs suggests the state ceiling on payments to nursing homes for Medicaid recipients is sufficient to meet nursing homes' expenses.

The nursing home industry has asked the State Department of Public Welfare to increase the maximum because the nursing homes say they are losing money on Medicaid patients.

Don Leuenberger, a budget analyst who coordinated the audit, said nursing homes may in fact be losing money on Medicaid patients where counties have authorized payments less than the state ceiling.

The state welfare program is administered at the county level. County welfare departments negotiate the actual amount paid nursing homes for caring for Medicaid patients.

Guidelines Set

The state allows the counties to spend no more than $12.10-$13.97 per day for a Medicaid patient, depending on the type of care needed.

The audit revealed 12 non - government - affiliated nursing homes experienced a $12.80 average daily cost for each patient. Leuenberger noted that figure is within the maximum.

However, the audit also showed the non-government nursing homes received an average payment of $11.77 for welfare patients. That means the homes were losing $1.03 a day for every Medicaid patient.

The nursing homes had asked the state to raise the maximum payment to $16.18.

On the average, he said, the study justifies some increase in the payments negotiated by the counties with the nursing homes.

Maximum Reached

County commsisioners in Douglas and Lancaster Counties have set Medicaid payments at the maximum allowed by the state, he said.

Medicaid is funded jointly by the federal government, the state and the county. Leuenberger said recipients generally pay up to 20% of the authorized rate.

Roughly $26 million is spent annually in Nebraska on Medicaid.

The State Welfare Department is presently devising a new plan, scheduled to go into effect July 1, basing Medicaid on cost-related factors.

Options Noted

Leuenberger said, "That doesn't mean we will pay everybody's cost whatever that might be. We have the option of basing costs on an average rate and pay costs up to and including that rate."

The audit also turned up some other "surprising" facts about Medicaid, he said. One is that private nursing homes have a higher percentage of their patients on welfare than government-operated nursing homes.

In addition, the amount of nursing care per patient in a non-government nursing home is only slightly greater than that provided in public homes.

Administration costs for non-government nursing homes, however, are considerably higher than public homes, the audit indicated.

Leuenberger said the audit also surprised him in that it indicated, "There doesn't seem to be much in the way of economy of scale with larger nursing homes."

Nick Bashara, Member Of LES Board Resigns

Acting City Council Chairman Dick Baker said the council will meet with the mayor next week to find a replacement for Nick Bashara who has resigned from the Lincoln Electric System Administrative Board.

Bashara, an outspoken member of the LES Board, said Tuesday he resigned because he needs to spend more time on his university research.

Bashara said his resignation had nothing to do with past controversies surrounding LES. At one time, he threatened to quit when the City Council and board were at odds over several issues.

Bashara, a research professor and professor of electrical engineering at the University of Nebraska, said, "I have just too many things to do."

Work on the LES Board is increasing, he added, and said he is on a leave of absence from the university to finish some work. He said he won't have the time to devote to LES.

His term on the board would have expired in December. Mayor Helen Boosalis will name a replacement, with approval from the City Council.

Bashara, who was named to the former Power Advisory Board in 1968, said LES "has come a long way the eight years I've been on the board."

Aircraft Given Iowa

Unicam OKs Pay Plan Calling For 6% Raises

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature Tuesday approved a new state salary plan which would guarantee employes outside of the higher education system a 6% pay hike on July 1.

An additional 1% increase in state agency salary budgets would supply funds for supplemental merit pay hikes.

But, in no event, could any employe receive more than a $1,200 salary increase for the year.

That policy, proposed by Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln as a means of limiting merit pay and targeting the merit salary funds to low and middle-income employes, was approved on a 27-14 vote.

It replaces the Appropriations Committee's plan for a 5% salary hike for all employes outside of the higher education system, and a 2% agency salary pool for additional merit pay increases.

Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue said he will later ask the Legislature to replace the Barnett plan with a proposal to give all employes a salary increase of $450 plus a 2% hike in their annual earnings.

The new salary proposal was attached to LB691, an operational budget bill which funds state agencies other than higher education entities with $607 million for fiscal 1976-77.

The measure, which includes about $250 million in state tax appropriations, cleared its initial floor hurdle after two days of debate on a 31-2 vote.

Dissenting ballots were cast by Sens. Robert Clark of Sidney and John DeCamp of Neligh.

Before sending the bill on its way, senators rescinded Monday's action which had added $194,000 to the Department of Public Welfare's budget for crippled children's services.

That money was designed to pay physicians treating patients at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

Without such payment, the Legislature has been told, the staff physicians treat those patients at private hospitals where they can be paid for their services.

That practice is "unjustifiable," Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha said in asking senators to rescind their earlier action.

His motion was approved on a 25-8 vote.

The only other major proposed amendment was rejected on a 12-25 score.

That one, offered by Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston, would have wiped out the $55 million in annual state aid to public schools.

Koch, sponsor of a bill to increase the level of state aid to $70 million a year, said the Legislature should have an opportunity to decide whether school aid is a worthwhile program.

"It's high time we get it off dead center," he declared.

Barnett's salary plan was an alternative to his earlier proposal to provide employes with an across-the-board 7% salary hike. The initial proposal fell on a 21-21 tie vote.

Merit pay increases "go to people who pay attention to their department heads . . . that's the polite way of saying it," Barnett told his colleagues.

Somehow, they do not often "find their way to the low paid employe," he said.

More bluntly, Lewis termed the merit pay plan a "brown nose concept."

Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha argued that merit increases are justified to reward industrious employes.

Without merit pay, Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica said, the state gives everyone an equal percentage hike "regardless of performance or skill."

Budget figures for major spending agencies in the bill are not far apart from Gov. J. James Exon's recommendations.

The top five general fund figures:

— Department of Education: $73.4 million compared to Exon's $71.6 million.

— Department of Public Welfare: $45.2 million compared to Exon's $45.7 million.

— Department of Public Institutions: $31.7 million compared to Exon's $31.6 million.

— Department of Revenue: $25.4 million compared to Exon's $25.5 million.

— Department of Correctional Services: $12.4 million compared to Exon's $12.3 million.

Power, Heat Outages Plague Campus, City

Gremlins played havoc with electricity, steam and water service at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Tuesday.

Power outages were reported at the Nebraska Union, East Campus went without steam heat for two hours and a small water line ruptured on East Campus.

The power outage at the Nebraska Union occurred when a transformer blew up shortly after 9 p.m.

The Union went completely without power for about one hour during the morning and for an hour in the afternoon when the damage, estimated at $2,500 to $3,000, was repaired.

Complete power was restored at 4:30 p.m., according to Verne Traudt, manager of utilities for UNL. For much of the day the Union had partial power, meaning that lights and the Crib's griddle were in operation, but air circulation equipment was not.

East Campus lost its steam, used for heating and for processing some food items, when a miniature relay sealed when voltage dropped (the lights went dim) shortly after 9:30 a.m.

The equipment was repaired and steam restored within two and one-half hours, according to Traudt.

Both of the university's equipment failures may have been related to a switching equipment malfunction at the Lincoln Electric System's substation on 2nd St., university officials speculated.

The malfunction caused two power outages of less than a minute in an area roughly bounded by Holdrege, South, 2nd and 33rd streets Tuesday morning.

The leaking pipe reported on East Campus will be repaired Wednesday when married students living in on-campus housing presumably will not be at home, according to university officials, who said the leak did not have serious immediate consequences.

Famous Scalp Specialist Tells Truth About Saving Falling Hair

These private individual consultations will be held at the Sleepy Hollow, 4848 "O" St., on Thursday, March 18, from 2:00 to 9:00 p.m.
Ask hotel clerk for Mr. J. J. Wooley. He will do the rest.
Phone 464-3166

LINCOLN, March 17 — In an interview, J. J. Wooley, nationally famous consultant for the International Hair and Scalp Specialists, Inc., said, "There are many different scalp disorders that cause most men and women to lose hair. Using common sense, a person must realize no one tonic or so-called cure-all could correct all the disorders," he explained.

Guaranteed

"International, recognizing that most people are skeptical, offers a guarantee" Wooley said. Once a person avails himself of the International treatment his skepticism immediately disappears. You will be given a written guarantee from the beginning to the end on a pro-rated basis.

Hopeless Cases Discouraged

First the International consultants are quick to tell hopeless cases that they cannot be helped. But the "hopeless" cases are few. Everyone is given a complete private consultation to determine the condition of his or her scalp, and cause for their hair trouble.

Free Consultations

This consultation is very thorough and highly technical. It requires 20 to 30 minutes. There is no charge for this consultation and no appointment is necessary. After the consultation he or she is told the required length of treatment and how much it will cost. After starting treatment, a consultant will return to check client's progress.

To provide the opportunity of having normal, healthy hair to the thousands who are desperately looking for help, the firm is sending specialists to various cities throughout the United States to conduct consultation and start home treatment.

Hopeless Cases Refused

No Cure All . . . We have no cure-all for slick, shiny baldness. International consultants will accept only clients whose hair we feel sure will respond to treatment. They cannot help individuals who are slick bald, or the majority of cases of baldness and excessive hair loss, called male pattern baldness, where no treatment, including the International treatment, is of any value. Therefore, International will continue their policy of refusing all hopeless cases.

There is one thing Wooley wants to be certain every man and woman knows. If hair appears to recede at the temples or a spot begins to show up on the crown of the head, there is something wrong and it should be given immediate attention.

Hair For Lifetime

"If clients follow our directions during treatment, and after they finish the course, there is no reason why they will not have hair all the rest of their lives,"Wooley said. "Our firm is definitely behind this treatment; it all depends on the individual client's faithful observation of a few simple rules."

How's Your Hair"

If it worries you, just go to the Sleepy Hollow, 4848 "O" St., on Thursday, March 18, from 2:00 to 9:00 p.m. Ask for Mr. J. J. Wooley. Or phone 464-3166. No appointment necessary. Interviews are given in private with no possible embarrassment.

Foster Parent Booklet Ready For Distribution

A State Welfare Department official announced that a new "guide for foster parents" has been printed and is ready for distribution across the state.

Larry Nedrow, chief of the department's division of social services, said the handbook describes foster parent responsibilities, rights of the child under law and other general information as well as "some insights on foster parenting."

Nedrow said the booklet is for current foster parents as well as those interested in becoming foster parents.

The official said there are now 1,800 children living in foster homes provided by more than 800 families and individuals., Nedrow added interest in providing foster homes is on the increase.

Loch Ness Tale Centuries Old

Loch Ness, Scotland (UPI) — The Loch Ness monster recently has been hunted with all kinds of electronic gadgetry, but the story is more than 1,400 years old. According to legend, St. Colomba engaged the monster in a duel on the shore of Loch Ness in 565 A.D.

A booklet, "Loch Ness and Its Monster," written by a monk from Fort Augustus Abbey, describes the story and is on sale at the abbey bookstore.

Debate On Criminal Code Postponed

By The Associated Press

Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said Tuesday that debate on the new Nebraska criminal code would be delayed until next year.

Luedtke said he and his committee members were afraid that with only 11 working days left, there would not be adequate time to discuss the bill this session.

"We're doing it basically in the interest of reality," Luedtke said. The criminal code had been billed as one of the major issues facing the current session of the Legislature.

Technically, the bill, which has been seven years in the writing, will die at the end of the session. However, Luedtke said the next Legislature could take action to affirm the work that has been done so far. The bill is the first complete rewrite of criminal laws in Nebraska history.

Luedtke said the bill would be available for debate during the opening days of the coming session when senators are waiting for committees to complete work on bills and bring them to the floor.

Luedtke said the current session ran out of time because of "a terrible waste of this body's time on long debate."

Luedtke said he would attempt to amend a rule to limit each senator to five minutes debate on each issue.

Currently, they are allowed 10 minutes.

Bill Giving Ed Board Final Say Gets Okay

The Legislature reversed itself Tuesday and decided to let the state Board of Education have the final word in disputes involving children in Class VI school districts who want to attend a school in a neighboring state.

Lawmakers gave second-round approval to LB920, designed to let a Class VI local board of education pay the tuition of a child who lives within the district, but who wants to attend high school outside the district in another state.

As amended, the bill would let parents appeal to the state board for a binding decision if dissatisfied with the local board's decision. That amendment, adopted 37-0, struck a provision sponsored by Alliance Sen. Leslie Stull that would not have bound the local board to the state board decision.

Stull compromised through a provision which said the process referred only to schools outside the state. The school outside the district would have to be at least 10 miles closer to the pupil's home than the school inside the district.

Unicam OKs Renovating Hospital For State Use

The Legislature voted 35-7 Tuesday to pass a bill appropriating $776,000 for the purchase and renovation of the old St. Mary's Hospital in North Platte for use as a state office building.

Earlier, the Legislature passed a bill working out technical problems with the purchase agreement. The appropriations bill, LB634A, includes $676,000 for renovations of the building and operating costs the first year.

The bill also contains $100,000 for the first two year's payments under the 10-year lease-purchase agreement.

The legislation this year was needed because the attorney general's office objected to legislation passed last year. Last year's bill unconstitutionally committed future sessions of the Legislature to appropriate money for the building.

The current bills provide only for the lease of the building. But there is a gentleman's agreement that it will be turned over to the state after 10 year's lease payments are made.

Another bill passed by the Legislature, LB869, changes internal audit procedures within the Department of Corrections. It passed on a vote of 47-0.

Dr. Dillon Aids Ford Foundation

Dr. Elizabeth (Betty) Dillon, staff development director for the Lincoln Public Schools, is helping the Ford Foundation determine ways to make the best use of its money.

Dr. Dillon and open education pioneer Leonard Sealey of England compose one of three teams to investigate current practices of school districts with staff development programs.

They are visiting districts throughout America, interviewing those involved in teacher-training programs, to provide the foundation with recommendations on ways to improve them as part of a school's instructional role.

Meanwhile, economists are examining costs of staff development programs, and legal experts are analyzing how states handle the programs.

"The Ford Foundation has spent massive amounts of money on educational projects all across the country," but many didn't produce the "carryover or substantial change" hoped for, Dr. Dillon said.

Because some of Ford's "infusions of money didn't seem to work too well" and because foundations have tightened their grant drawers, she said Ford decided to explore how to make its money work better.

Lincoln "has one of the older staff development programs in the country" at seven years old, but it will not be part of the study, she said.

After the June 30 deadline, Dr. Dillon said she will "bring back ideas.".. As director of the Lincoln program, "it's very important to keep my own batteries charged up," she said.

Knight-Ridder Selling Stations For $12 Million

Miami (AP) — Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc. said Tuesday it has agreed to sell its 26½% interest in the major Minneapolis-St. Paul radio-television operation to LIN Broadcasting of New York City.

The agreed upon purchase price for WCCO AM-FM-TV was $12 million.

MTC Properties Inc., which owns half of the stations' parent company, Mid-Continent Radio Television Inc., has the right to block the deal by buying Knight-Ridder's interest itself.

The transaction also depends on approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

Terms are $6 million when the deal is finalized, with the balance due within 360 days and subject to interest set at the prime lending rate, company officials said.

The stations were part of Ridder Publication Inc.'s holdings at the time of the company's merger with Knight Newspapers Inc. in November 1974.

LIN owns three television, four AM and three FM stations.

Solons Kill Bill To Give CPA Credit

The Legislature voted 27-14 Tuesday to kill a bill which would have allowed work as a Department of Revenue auditor to count toward the experience requirement for designation as a certified public accountant.

Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich, in making the motion to kill LB409, said experience as a tax auditor is not broad enough to qualify a person as a CPA.

State Tax Commissioner William Peters said the bill was needed to keep his personnel from leaving state employment.

Air Guard Unit Rated As Ready

The Air Force's Tactical Air Command Team, a group of 40 experts headed by Col. Douglas A. Roysdon, found the Nebraska Air National Guard to be "well trained and in a high state of combat readiness" after inspecting its units the past weekend.

The inspection team confirmed the readiness status of the 155th Tactical Reconnaissance group and validated the unit's capability of effectively performing its reconnaissance mission.

Lt. Col. Richard Bertrand will take over the Nebraska Air Command this month from Col. Fred H. Bailey Jr., who has been commander about 30 years.

Museum Has Clocks

Zaandam, The Netherlands (UPI) — Prince Claus has opened a new clock museum.

Malpractice Tabling Rejected By 2 Votes

The Legislature barely rejected a move Tuesday to table a bill that would let hospitals and doctors form their own malpractice insurance associations.

A motion by Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner to bracket LB809 until March 25 failed on a 24-22 vote.

Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh opposed the motion and accused Warner and others of "blackmail," charging they wanted to hold up LB809 until the proponents of another malpractice measure, LB703, were satisfied with action taken on it. The latter is the Nebraska Medical Association's malpractice bill which has yet to win first round approval.

Warner said Cavanaugh had resorted to "vicious lies," and said he only felt that the malpractice bills should be considered together.

Senators added some amendments to LB809, dealing with regulating out-of-state hospitals which want to join one of the associations, then gave it second round approval.

Exon Vetoes Displacing Of Institutions Director

Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday vetoed a bill to remove the Director of Public Institutions from the Nebraska Commission on Alcoholism.

The proposal called for Director of the Division of Alcoholism to replace the Director of Institutions on the commission. Exon called that idea "poor legislative policy."

"It would appear that LB652 is simply one step in an effort to separate and make independent the Division of Alcoholism within the Department of Public Institutions," Exon said in his veto message to the Legislature.

He said the bill would give the Director of Alcoholism more authority and power than his supervisor, the Director of Institutions.

"Efforts should be made to streamline the operation of the Department of Institutions by strengthening the role of the director rather than weakening it," Exon said.

Optimists Plan Park Additions

The Lincoln Optimist Club plans to add hosrseshoe pits and tennis courts to its playground area next to Sawyer Snell Park.

The Optimists, celebrating their 50th anniversary this year, now have 116 members, including charter members Max Mozer and Billy Wolff.

Constable Works Will Be Shown

London (UPI) — A comprehensive exhibition of the works of John Constable will be held at the Tate Gallery between Feb. 18 and April 25 to mark the 200th anniversary of the great English landscape artist.

The village of East Bergholt, 63 miles northeast of London in the Stour Valley, where Constable painted many of his finest works, is also planning a series of events during the summer to mark the anniversary.

To Your Good Health

Unnecessary Use Of Vitamins Is Waste Of Money

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In your opinion, could taking of vitamins when they are not needed be the cause of skin problems, or could it be harmful in any way? My mother is 69, in reasonably good health, has a good appetite, and gets well-balanced meals every day. She is taking vitamins. She does have skin problems — itching, etc. — Mrs. M.C.

Dear Doctor: My husband is an absolute vitamin "nut." While most couples argue over money, we argue over vitamins. He insists I take a daily vitamin tablet of vitamin C and one of vitamin E. We are both in our late 30s and in good health. But I worry about the effects of these daily doses.

We would both appreciate your views on this. — T.Y.

All three people involved here — Mrs. M.C.'s mother and Mr. and Mrs. T.Y. — would not seem to need any vitamin supplements since all report good health.

The fact is that use of vitamins beyond normal bodily needs is a waste of money. In some instances it can be a health hazard. The only real indication for vitamin supplements is when the diet is inadequate in them, as during long illnesses or after surgery. There is — to answer to Mrs. M.C. — a danger in taking excessive quantities of vitamins A and D. They are fat soluble and to a degree can be stored in excess in body tissue, but toxic doses can cause problems, as nausea, weakness and nervousness.

An excess of D can cause kidney impairment, and toxic doses of A can cause swellings, headache or hair loss.

It might be of specific interest to Mrs. M.C.'s mother that an excess of A can also be a factor in roughened skin and cracked lips.

Other vitamins are soluble in water, and for that reason are readily eliminated in stool and urine. These include the C vitamins and the B group. Vitamin C supplement might be in order if the intake of fruits and fresh vegetables is inadequate.

The real role of vitamin E is not clear, yet it has been promoted for a bewildering variety of disorders. But it is present in most food, and any balanced diet provides it amply.

To my knowledge there has been no conclusive evidence that vitamins taken in quantities over what the body actually needs do any good, or make a person stronger, more potent, brighter, or better able to avoid common ailments.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me if I can eat skins like those on blueberries and peas? I have diverticulosis. — Mrs. A.M.

Diet in diverticulosis has rather few restrictions. The emphasis in modern treatment is on what should be eaten rather than on what should not be eaten. Many diverticulosis patients are told to eat a low residue diet, and many have overdone this at the expense of proper bowel function.

Generally, foods of moderate residue are permitted. Take the middle ground. Eat what you like within limits. Remember, too, that foods normally considered to be high residue become less so when cooked — your peas and blueberries, for examples.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

With spring approaching, many Nebraska sailors are readying their boats for summer.

Scraping off the old paint and coating with a bright, fresh new paint job are often part of the refurbishing.

The Nebraska Medical Association warns that whether you are refurbishing boats or painting other creations, painting in confined spaces or small rooms may have an effect on the central nervous system.

Essentially all paints, except latex, can cause headache, dizziness, vision disturbances or loss of equilibrium when applied in small areas without adequate ventilation. Most paints are combustible and should be kept from open flame, sparks or heat.

The Nebraska Medical Association urges you to read the label on the paint can and follow its instructions. Avoid inhalation of solvent vapors and spray mist. Avoid alcoholic beverages during and shortly after painting, to minimize toxic effects of any inhaled vapors. Wear gloves and avoid skin contact with paint.

Unicam OKs Pay Plan Calling For 6% Raises

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature Tuesday approved a new state salary plan which would guarantee employes outside of the higher education system a 6% pay hike on July 1.

An additional 1% increase in state agency salary budgets would supply funds for supplemental merit pay hikes.

But, in no event, could any employe receive more than a $1,200 salary increase for the year.

That policy, proposed by Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln as a means of limiting merit pay and targeting the merit salary funds to low and middle-income employes, was approved on a 27-14 vote.

It replaces the Appropriations Committee's plan for a 5% salary hike for all employes outside of the higher education system, and a 2% agency salary pool for additional merit pay increases.

Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue said he will later ask the Legislature to replace the Barnett plan with a proposal to give all employes a salary increase of $450 plus a 2% hike in their annual earnings.

The new salary proposal was attached to LB691, an operational budget bill which funds state agencies other than higher education entities with $607 million for fiscal 1976-77.

The measure, which includes about $250 million in state tax appropriations, cleared its initial floor hurdle after two days of debate on a 31-2 vote.

Dissenting ballots were cast by Sens. Robert Clark of Sidney and John DeCamp of Neligh.

Before sending the bill on its way, senators rescinded Monday's action which had added $194,000 to the Department of Public Welfare's budget for crippled children's services.

That money was designed to pay physicians treating patients at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

Without such payment, the Legislature has been told, the staff physicians treat those patients at private hospitals where they can be paid for their services.

That practice is "unjustifiable," Sen. John Cavanaugh III of Omaha said in asking senators to rescind their earlier action.

His motion was approved on a 25-8 vote.

The only other major proposed amendment was rejected on a 12-25 score.

That one, offered by Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston, would have wiped out the $55 million in annual state aid to public schools.

Koch, sponsor of a bill to increase the level of state aid to $70 million a year, said the Legislature should have an opportunity to decide whether school aid is a worthwhile program.

"It's high time we get it off dead center," he declared.

Barnett's salary plan was an alternative to his earlier proposal to provide employes with an across-the-board 7% salary hike. The initial proposal fell on a 21-21 tie vote.

Merit pay increases "go to people who pay attention to their department heads ... that's the polite way of saying it," Barnett told his colleagues.

Somehow, they do not often "find their way to the low paid employe," he said.

More bluntly, Lewis termed the merit pay plan a "brown nose concept."

Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha argued that merit increases are justified to reward industrious employes.

Without merit pay, Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica said, the state gives everyone an equal percentage hike "regardless of performance or skill."

Budget figures for major spending agencies in the bill are not far apart from Gov. J. James Exon's recommendations.

The top five general fund figures:

— Department of Education: $73.4 million compared to Exon's $71.6 million.

— Department of Public Welfare: $45.2 million compared to Exon's $45.7 million.

— Department of Public Institutions: $31.7 million compared to Exon's $31.6 million.

— Department of Revenue: $25.4 million compared to Exon's $25.5 million.

— Department of Correctional Services: $12.4 million compared to Exon's $12.3 million.

Power, Heat Outages Plague Campus, City

Gremlins played havoc with electricity, steam and water service at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Tuesday.

Power outages were reported at the Nebraska Union, East Campus went without steam heat for two hours and a small water line ruptured on East Campus.

The power outage at the Nebraska Union occurred when a transformer blew up shortly after 9 p.m.

The Union went completely without power for about one hour during the morning and for an hour in the afternoon when the damage, estimated at $2,500 to $3,000, was repaired.

Complete power was restored at 4:30 p.m., according to Verne Traudt, manager of utilities for UNL. For much of the day the Union had partial power, meaning that lights and the Crib's griddle were in operation, but air circulation equipment was not.

East Campus lost its steam, used for heating and for processing some food items, when a miniature relay scaled when voltage dropped (the lights went dim) shortly after 9:30 a.m.

The equipment was repaired and steam restored within two and one-half hours, according to Traudt.

Both of the university's equipment failures may have been related to a switching equipment malfunction at the Lincoln Electric System's substation on 2nd St., university officials speculated.

The malfunction caused two power outages of less than a minute in an area roughly bounded by Holdrege, South, 2nd and 33rd streets Tuesday morning.

The leaking pipe reported on East Campus will be repaired Wednesday when married students living in on-campus housing presumably will not be at home, according to university officials, who said the leak did not have serious immediate consequences.

Famous Scalp Specialist Tells Truth About Saving Falling Hair

These private individual consultations will be held at the Sleepy Hollow, 4848 "O" St., on Thursday, March 18, from 2:00 to 9:00 p.m.
Ask hotel clerk for Mr. J. J. Wooley. He will do the rest.
Phone 464-3166

To provide the opportunity of having normal, healthy hair to the thousands who are desperately looking for help, the firm is sending specialists to various cities throughout the United States to conduct consultation and start home treatment.

LINCOLN, March 17 — In an interview, J. J. Wooley, nationally famous consultant for the International Hair and Scalp Specialists, Inc., said, "There are many different scalp disorders that cause most men and women to lose hair. Using common sense, a person must realize no one tonic or so-called cure-all could correct all the disorders," he explained.

Guaranteed

"International, recognizing that most people are skeptical, offers a guarantee" Wooley said. Once a person avails himself of the International treatment his skepticism immediately disappears. You will be given a written guarantee from the beginning to the end on a pro-rated basis.

Hopeless Cases Refused

No Cure All ... We have no cure-all for slick, shiny baldness. International consultants will accept only clients whose hair we feel sure will respond to treatment. They cannot help individuals who are slick bald, or the majority of cases of baldness and excessive hair loss, called male pattern baldness, where no treatment, including the International treatment, is of any value. Therefore, International will continue their policy of refusing all hopeless cases.

There is one thing Wooley wants to be certain every man and woman knows. If hair appears to recede at the temples or a spot begins to show up on the crown of the head, there is something wrong and it should be given immediate attention.

Hopeless Cases Discouraged

First the International consultants are quick to tell hopeless cases that they cannot be helped. But the "hopeless" cases are few. Everyone is given a complete private consultation to determine the condition of his or her scalp, and cause for their hair trouble.

Hair For Lifetime

"If clients follow our directions during treatment and after they finish the course, there is no reason why they will not have hair all the rest of their lives," Wooley said. Our firm is definitely behind this treatment, it all depends on the individual client's faithful observation of a few simple rules.

Free Consultations

This consultation is very thorough and highly technical. It requires 20 to 30 minutes. There is no charge for this consultation and no appointment is necessary. After the consultation he or she is told the required length of treatment and how much it will cost. After starting treatment, a consultant will return to check client's progress.

How's Your Hair

If it worries you, just go to the Sleepy Hollow, 4848 "O" St., on Thursday, March 18, from 2:00 to 9:00 p.m. Ask for Mr. J. J. Wooley. Or phone 464-3166. No appointment necessary. Interviews are given in private with no possible embarrassment.

Foster Parent Booklet Ready For Distribution

A State Welfare Department official announced that a new "guide for foster parents" has been printed and is ready for distribution across the state.

Larry Nedrow, chief of the department's division of social services, said the handbook describes foster parent responsibilities, rights of the child under law and other general information as well as "some insights on foster parenting."

Nedrow said the booklet is for current foster parents as well as those interested in becoming foster parents.

The official said there are now 1,800 children living in foster homes provided by more than 800 families and individuals., Nedrow added interest in providing foster homes is on the increase.

Loch Ness Tale Centuries Old

Loch Ness, Scotland (UPI) — The Loch Ness monster recently has been hunted with all kinds of electronic gadgetry, but the story is more than 1,400 years old. According to legend, St. Colomba engaged the monster in a duel on the shore of Loch Ness in 565 A.D.

A booklet, "Loch Ness and Its Monster," written by a monk from Fort Augustus Abbey, describes the story and is on sale at the abbey bookstore.

Debate On Criminal Code Postponed

Sen. Roland Luedtke

By The Associated Press

Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said Tuesday that debate on the new Nebraska criminal code would be delayed until next year.

Luedtke said he and his committee members were afraid that with only 11 working days left, there would not be adequate time to discuss the bill this session.

"We're doing it basically in the interest of reality," Luedtke said. The criminal code had been billed as one of the major issues facing the current session of the Legislature.

Technically, the bill, which has been seven years in the writing, will die at the end of the session. However, Luedtke said the next Legislature could take action to affirm the work that has been done so far. The bill is the first complete rewrite of criminal laws in Nebraska history.

Luedtke said the bill would be available for debate during the opening days of the coming session when senators are waiting for committees to complete work on bills and bring them to the floor.

Luedtke said the current session ran out of time because of "a terrible waste of this body's time on long debate."

Luedtke said he would attempt to amend a rule to limit each senator to five minutes debate on each issue.

Currently, they are allowed 10 minutes.

Bill Giving Ed Board Final Say Gets Okay

The Legislature reversed itself Tuesday and decided to let the state Board of Education have the final word in disputes involving children in Class VI school districts who want to attend a school in a neighboring state.

Lawmakers gave second-round approval to LB920, designed to let a Class VI local board of education pay the tuition of a child who lives within the district, but who wants to attend high school outside the district in another state.

As amended, the bill would let parents appeal to the state board for a binding decision if dissatisfied with the local board's decision. That amendment, adopted 37-0, struck a provision sponsored by Alliance Sen. Leslie Stull that would not have bound the local board to the state board decision.

Stull compromised through a provision which said the process referred only to schools outside the state. The school outside the district would have to be at least 10 miles closer to the pupil's home than the school inside the district.

Unicam OKs Renovating Hospital For State Use

The Legislature voted 35-7 Tuesday to pass a bill appropriating $776,000 for the purchase and renovation of the old St. Mary's Hospital in North Platte for use as a state office building.

Earlier, the Legislature passed a bill working out technical problems with the purchase agreement. The appropriations bill, LB634A, includes $676,000 for renovations of the building and operating costs the first year.

The bill also contains $100,000 for the first two year's payments under the 10-year lease-purchase agreement.

The legislation this year was needed because the attorney general's office objected to legislation passed last year. Last year's bill unconstitutionally committed future sessions of the Legislature to appropriate money for the building.

The current bills provide only for the lease of the building. But there is a gentleman's agreement that it will be turned over to the state after 10 year's lease payments are made.

Another bill passed by the Legislature, LB869, changes internal audit procedures within the Department of Corrections. It passed on a vote of 47-0.

Dr. Dillon Aids Ford Foundation

Dr. Elizabeth (Betty) Dillon, staff development director for the Lincoln Public Schools, is helping the Ford Foundation determine ways to make the best use of its money.

Dr. Dillon and open education pioneer Leonard Sealey of England compose one of three teams to investigate current practices of school districts with staff development programs.

They are visiting districts throughout America, interviewing those involved in teacher-training programs, to provide the foundation with recommendations on ways to improve them as part of a school's instructional role.

Meanwhile, economists are examining costs of staff development programs, and legal experts are analyzing how states handle the programs.

"The Ford Foundation has spent massive amounts of money on educational projects all across the country," but many didn't produce the "carryover or substantial change" hoped for, Dr. Dillon said.

Because some of Ford's "infusions of money didn't seem to work too well" and because foundations have tightened their grant drawers, she said Ford decided to explore how to make its money work better.

Lincoln "has one of the older staff development programs in the country" at seven years old, but it will not be part of the study, she said.

After the June 30 deadline, Dr. Dillon said she will "bring back ideas."... As director of the Lincoln program, "it's very important to keep my own batteries charged up," she said.

Knight-Ridder Selling Stations For $12 Million

Miami (AP) — Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc. said Tuesday it has agreed to sell its 26½% interest in the major Minneapolis-St. Paul radio-television operation to LIN Broadcasting of New York City.

The agreed upon purchase price for WCCO AM-FM-TV was $12 million.

MTC Properties Inc., which owns half of the stations' parent company, Mid-Continent Radio Television Inc., has the right to block the deal by buying Knight-Ridder's interest itself.

The transaction also depends on approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

Terms are $6 million when the deal is finalized, with the balance due within 360 days and subject to interest set at the prime lending rate, company officials said.

The stations were part of Ridder Publication Inc.'s holdings at the time of the company's merger with Knight Newspapers Inc. in November 1974.

LIN owns three television, four AM and three FM stations.

Solons Kill Bill To Give CPA Credit

The Legislature voted 27-14 Tuesday to kill a bill which would have allowed work as a Department of Revenue auditor to count toward the experience requirement for designation as a certified public accountant.

Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich, in making the motion to kill LB409, said experience as a tax auditor is not broad enough to qualify a person as a CPA.

State Tax Commissioner William Peters said the bill was needed to keep his personnel from leaving state employment.

Air Guard Unit Rated As Ready

The Air Force's Tactical Air Command Team, a group of 40 experts headed by Col. Douglas A. Roysdon, found the Nebraska Air National Guard to be "well trained and in a high state of combat readiness" after inspecting its units the past weekend.

The inspection team confirmed the readiness status of the 155th Tactical Reconnaissance group and validated the unit's capability of effectively performing its reconnaissance mission.

Lt. Col. Richard Bertrand will take over the Nebraska Air Command this month from Col. Fred H. Bailey Jr., who has been commander about 30 years.

Museum Has Clocks

Zaandam, The Netherlands (UPI) — Prince Claus has opened a new clock museum.

Malpractice Tabling Rejected By 2 Votes

The Legislature barely rejected a move Tuesday to table a bill that would let hospitals and doctors form their own malpractice insurance associations.

A motion by Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner to bracket LB809 until March 25 failed on a 24-22 vote.

Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh opposed the motion and accused Warner and others of "blackmail," charging they wanted to hold up LB809 until the proponents of another malpractice measure, LB703, were satisfied with action taken on it. The latter is the Nebraska Medical Association's malpractice bill which has yet to win first round approval.

Warner said Cavanaugh had resorted to "vicious lies," and said he only felt that the malpractice bills should be considered together.

Senators added some amendments to LB809, dealing with regulating out-of-state hospitals which want to join one of the associations, then gave it second round approval.

Exon Vetoes Displacing Of Institutions Director

Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday vetoed a bill to remove the Director of Public Institutions from the Nebraska Commission on Alcoholism.

The proposal called for Director of the Division of Alcoholism to replace the Director of Institutions on the commission. Exon called that idea "poor legislative policy."

"It would appear that LB652 is simply one step in an effort to separate and make independent the Division of Alcoholism within the Department of Public Institutions," Exon said in his veto message to the Legislature.

He said the bill would give the Director of Alcoholism more authority and power than his supervisor, the Director of Institutions.

"Efforts should be made to streamline the operation of the Department of Institutions by strengthening the role of the director rather than weakening it," Exon said.

Optimists Plan Park Additions

The Lincoln Optimist Club plans to add hosrseshoe pits and tennis courts to its playground area next to Sawyer Snell Park.

The Optimists, celebrating their 50th anniversary this year, now have 116 members, including charter members Max Mozer and Billy Wolff.

Constable Works Will Be Shown

London (UPI) — A comprehensive exhibition of the works of John Constable will be held at the Tate Gallery between Feb. 18 and April 25 to mark the 200th anniversary of the great English landscape artist.

The village of East Bergholt, 63 miles northeast of London in the Stour Valley, where Constable painted many of his finest works, is also planning a series of events during the summer to mark the anniversary.

Heroin Situation Worsens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's heroin epidemic is progressively worsening again after an 18-month lag while pushers made a new Mexican connection after their Turkish supplies dried up, the National Institute on Drug Abuse reported Tuesday.

Dr. Robert L. DuPont, director of the institute, said he was misled by fragmentary statistics when he stated two years ago that the heroin problem had bottomed out.

"I would say that the epidemic is continuing, that it never ended," DuPont said on the basis of the government's first scientific gathering of data from six sources.

"There is clear evidence that since 1973 the heroin use problem in the United States has gotten progressively worse," he said. "The problem is getting worse, not alarmingly as it was in the 1960s, but progressively."

DuPont said the current estimate is that between 300,000 and 400,000 persons use illicit heroin daily, compared with rough estimates of 500,000 to 600,000 addicts in the peak year of 1971.

More importantly, he said, heroin use has followed the pattern of cigarette, marijuana and alcoholic beverage consumption, with use becoming balanced between the sexes and races and spreading across the entire nation including rural and urban areas.

"Heroin use is becoming a national problem. It is no longer confined to large Eastern cities," DuPont said. For example, there were 118 heroin-related deaths last year in San Diego, Calif., and 30 in Washingon, D.C., a city of about the same population.

"In many cities, the heroin overdose death rate is worse than it's ever been," he said.

Heroin addiction caught experts by surprise when it reached epidemic proportions in the 1960s, and began tapering off in the second half of 1972 and calendar 1973.

Unnecessary Use Of Vitamins Is Waste Of Money

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In your opinion, could taking of vitamins when they are not needed be the cause of skin problems, or could it be harmful in any way? My mother is 69, in reasonably good health, has a good appetite, and gets well-balanced meals every day. She is taking vitamins. She does have skin problems — itching, etc. — Mrs. M.C.

Dear Doctor: My husband is an absolute vitamin "nut." While most couples argue over money, we argue over vitamins. He insists I take a daily vitamin tablet of vitamin C and one of vitamin E. We are both in our late 30s and in good health. But I worry about the effects of these daily doses.

We would both appreciate your views on this. — T.Y.

All three people involved here — Mrs M C 's mother and Mr and Mrs T Y — would not seem to need any vitamin supplements since all report good health

The fact is that use of vitamins beyond normal bodily needs is a waste of money In some instances it can be a health hazard The only real indication for vitamin supplements is when the diet is inadequate in them, as during long illnesses or after surgery There is — to answer to Mrs M C — a danger in taking excessive quantities of vitamins A and D They are fat soluble and to a degree can be stored in excess in body tissue, but toxic doses can cause problems, as nausea, weakness and nervousness

An excess of D can cause kidney impairment, and toxic doses of A can cause swellings, headache or hair loss

It might be of specific interest to Mrs M C 's mother that an excess of A can also be a factor in roughened skin and cracked lips

Other vitamins are soluble in water, and for that reason are readily eliminated in stool and urine These include the C vitamins and the B group Vitamin C supplement might be in order if the intake of fruits and fresh vegetables is inadequate.

The real role of vitamin E is not clear, yet it has been promoted for a bewildering variety of disorders But it is present in most food, and any balanced diet provides it amply

To my knowledge there has been no conclusive evidence that vitamins taken in quantities over what the body actually needs do any good or make a person stronger, more potent brighter, or better able to avoid common ailments

Dear Dr. Thosteson Please tell me if I can eat skins like those on blueberries and peas? I have diverticulosis. — Mrs. A.M.

Diet in diverticulosis has rather few restrictions The emphasis in modern treatment is on what should be eaten rather than on what should not be eaten Many diverticulosis patients are told to eat a low residue diet and many have overdone this at the expense of proper bowel function

Generally foods of moderate residue are permitted Take the middle ground Eat what you like within limits Remember too that foods normally considered to be high residue become less so when cooked — your peas and blueberries for examples

With spring approaching, many Nebraska sailors are readying their boats for summer

Scraping off the old paint and coating with a bright, fresh new paint job are often part of the refurbishing

The Nebraska Medical Association warns that whether you are refurbishing boats or painting other creations, painting in confined spaces or small rooms may have an effect on the central nervous system

Essentially all paints, except latex, can cause headache, dizziness, vision disturbances or loss of equilibrium when applied in small areas without adequate ventilation Most paints are combustible and should be kept from open flame, sparks or heat

The Nebraska Medical Association urges you to read the label on the paint can and follow its instructions Avoid inhalation of solvent vapors and spray mist Avoid alcoholic beverages during and shortly after painting, to minimize toxic effects of any inhaled vapors Wear gloves and avoid skin contact with paint

The Adventures Of Inese

Lifescape

AMERICAN ABROAD . . . in Goa.

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

She has crewed on a yacht from Fiji to Australia, traveled to more than 14 countries, hiked up 14,500 feet to see Mt. Everest, lived in a Zen commune in Japan and been booted out of two countries by communists.

Inese Civkulis has experienced firsthand more adventures in her 28 years than the rest of us Walter Mittys of the world do in a lifetime of daydreams.

Eight years ago the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aleksander Civkulis, 3925 N. 70th St., left Northwestern University and like many of her generation headed west — "I heard the call of the wild, of San Francisco."

Later her travels took her to Alaska where she worked to make enough money for the first leg of her trip further west — to the Orient, the South Pacific Islands, Australia, Southeast Asia.

Bali Before Tourists

She spent four months teaching English as a foreign language in a small private school on Tonga, discovered Bali before the tourists hit, when there were only three shacks as restaurants and four tiny hotels. While there she saved the life of a young Japanese woman who almost drowned.

She sold a few articles and pictures (small time, she calls them) and met an abundance of new friends of varying hues and nationalities.

"I thought I was a traveler," said Ms. Civkulis. That was before she made a second visit to Laos, landed a job teaching English in the Lao-American Association school in Vientien.

Stayed 2 Years

Once there, she "got hooked," stayed for two years until the communists closed the school.

She grew to love her job, rose steadily from teacher to administrative assistant, enjoyed the sophistication and night life of the former French provincial capital, met many interesting people and made many friends.

"I was respected and besides I was blonde. I was someone special," Ms. Civkulis recalls.

Then the communists came and the king was deposed. Most Americans and some Laotians fled the country, but Ms. Civkulis stayed on.

The communists banned rock music, western dancing, night clubs, jeans, all western clothes. Only the native skirt — the sinh — was allowed, and only cotton sinhs — no silk.

The Pathet Lao banned walking at night, television, radio from Thailand, movies not dubbed in Laotian.

Thai Border Closed

A border incident closed the Thai border, where many supplies crossed the Laos. Soon there was no gas, milk, sugar, detergent. About a fourth of the stores closed.

The Lao-American school enrollment dropped from 2,000 to 250.

But the young American woman stayed on.

The Pathet Lao communists organized neighborhoods into small groups of about 10 families with a resident Pathet Lao soldier to instruct ("watch is what I call it") the families, Ms. Civkulis explained.

Taught Communism

The people were taught communist philosophy, learned patriotic songs and dances.

The victory celebrations, played in the news media across the world, were orchestrated by the communists. Civilians were taught arm salutes and proper chants; attendance was required, she said.

Ms. Civkulis never saw any violence, though she heard gun shots at night and knew of Laotions considered "American lackies" who were sent away for "political re-education. "No one who went away has come back yet," she said.

The rumors were varied. Some said re-education was working or studying; others said the people cleared mine fields. Still others said they were just shot.

But the communist propaganda had appeal, Ms. Civkulis said. The communists promised freedom, equality, no corruption, a return to Laotian tradition.

Many of the Laotians were not politically aware; they had no idea what was happening until the communists "took the king down," she said.

Children Berated

"Then out in the country many of the older people . . . berated their sons, saying 'you lost our country, our heritage'," she said.

Though knowing that someday the school would be closed, Ms. Civkulis did not leave.

"My life was in Laos. I had a lot of friends there, and it meant a lot to them that we stayed," she explained.

She was also "tremendously interested in seeing what was going to happen."

And she never felt in danger.

Auld Lang Syne

New Year's Eve the ban against western songs and dancing was lifted for the evening. With some friends Ms. Civkulis went to a local hotel for a celebration, then returned to her home to finish the evening dancing to western music.

Unknown to her, five Pathet Lao officials were among the guests. The men went out to get fruit salad and wine, then returned to give Ms. Civkulis her "first political lesson."

The men were not hostile, she said. And they explained that they did not dislike Americans, only the government, the CIA and the imperialists.

For months the school continued operation. "They probably didn't even know about us," guessed Ms. Civkulis.

But when the takeover finally came this January, "they were pretty decent about it."

News of the closure came just at the end of the term but the communists allowed the school to remain open a few more days so the students could finish final exams for the term and pick up their grades.

Staff Given Week

Then the staff was given a week to clear personal papers out of the office.

For Ms. Civkulis, born in Germany to Latvian parents, this was the second time she had been forced to leave a country by communists.

Late last month Ms. Civkulis came back to Lincoln for a visit and a rest.

"I didn't want to go on to another adventure. I wanted to make sure Laos stayed, that I remembered it the way it was . . . to have it momentous.

"I don't want to leave it just behind . . . I can't exactly explain . . . I have a lot of friends there," and her voice trailed off.

What is next for this 1966 valedictorian from Pius High School. Perhaps study at the East-West Center in Hawaii, finishinl a degree in journalism or maybe even a business degree.

"Of course if someone offers me an exciting job, I wouldn't pass up a golden opportunity."

Heroin Situation Worsens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's heroin epidemic is progressively worsening again after an 18-month lag while pushers made a new Mexican connection after their Turkish supplies dried up, the National Institute on Drug Abuse reported Tuesday

Dr Robert L DuPont, director of the institute, said he was misled by fragmentary statistics when he stated two years ago that the heroin problem had bottomed out

"I would say that the epidemic is continuing that it never ended" DuPont said on the basis of the government's first scientific gathering of data from six sources

There is clear evidence that since 1973 the heroin use problem in the United States has gotten progressively worse," he said "The problem is getting worse, not alarmingly as it was in the 1960s but progressively "

DuPont said the current estimate is that between 300,000 and 400 000 persons use illicit heroin daily compared with rough estimates of 500,000 to 600 000 addicts in the peak year of 1971

More importantly he said, heroin use has followed the pattern of cigarette, marijuana and alcoholic beverage consumption, with use becoming balanced between the sexes and races and spreading across the entire nation including rural and urban areas

"Heroin use is becoming a national problem It is no longer confined to large Eastern cities," DuPont said For example there were 118 heroin-related deaths last year in San Diego, Calif , and 30 in Washington, D C , a city of about the same population

"In many cities, the heroin overdose death rate is worse than it's ever been," he said

Heroin addiction caught experts by surprise when it reached epidemic proportions in the 1960s, and began tapering off in the second half of 1972 and calendar 1973

Kindness Passed On By Grandma Hanby

Today's contributor to "Write On" is a 20-year Lincoln resident who works in the produce department of a local supermarket. He worked for many years with youth in the YMCA, Regional Center and State Home for Children.

By GLENN CROOKS

I grew up on a farm in northwest Iowa. As a boy I raised popcorn and geese to earn my spending money. My dad furnished the feed and I the work. This was my only income and during the depression years I worked hard so I could buy my own clothes and relieve the family of some financial burdens. There were six of us children.

Now to have a good flock of geese, I needed a good gander, the male of the flock. I had saved my money, a dollar and seventy-five cents as I remember, and I knew just where I wanted to purchase my prize stock.

Down the road I went to Grandma Hanby, as everyone called her. She had canaries, kittens, puppies, ducks and geese, so many things that were interesting to a child. As usual we made the rounds to see all interesting creatures and then I made known my request. She agreed that I could pick out what I thought was the best and I did. We put him in a gunny sack with his head protruding through the hole we had cut for that purpose.

I gathered my coins and asked how much she would sell the gander for. She then informed me that she would not take a cent. But I couldn't take him home without paying, my dad would send me right back. Well, she said for me to tell my dad what she was about to tell me and he would understand.

write on

She said when she was a little girl she raised turkeys and also needed a male for her flock. A kindly lady had given her a gobler and told her when she grew up to do something nice for a boy or girl and to remind them to pass it on. So she was passing it on to me and hoped I would do the same.

When I got home my dad asked how much I paid and upon finding out I paid nothing he informed me I would have to return the beautiful creature. But I told dad what Grandma Hanby had said and with a twinkle in his eye he agreed.

Years later I moved to Lincoln. My sister who lives in Iowa informed me by letter that Grandma Hanby was celebrating her 90th birthday. I quickly went to the card shop and purchased a birthday card. I wrote a note in it, congratulating her on her 90th birthday and reminded her of the wonderful thing she had done for me years ago. I explained how it had been such a wonderful lesson to me and to the ones I had passed the story and deed on to over the years. I signed my name and underneath I wrote: "A boy who remembered."

My sister was at the birthday party for Grandma Hanby and the mail that day brought my card. Grandma read it and sat down in the midst of her friends and wrote me.

I have the card and letter she sent, in my book of treasures. In this letter she told how she had forgotten the incident, but was delighted to know she had done something for someone and they had remembered.

Over the years I have told this story and have tried to keep my promise to Grandma Hanby. To me it was true giving on her part for she had forgotten the incident.

What a wonderful world this would be if everyone passed on the little kindnesses they receive to someone else and that someone did the same.

Opening lead - king of hearts.

There is nothing unusual about declarer having a choice of two or more different methods of play. In exercising that choice, he should of course select the method of play that offers the best chance of success. South neglected to do so in this deal, and it cost him the contract.

He won the heart head with the ace, cashed the A-K of clubs, and continued with a club. West won with the nine, cashed the queen of hearts, and continued with the jack of clubs. When dummy ruffed with the seven, East overruffed with the ten and South finished down one.

The correct play is to lead a low trump to dummy at trick two! This loses a trump trick unnecessarily, but the trick comes back with interest.

East wins dummy's seven with the ten and returns a heart, but that is the end of the road for the defense. Whatever West plays, South enters dummy with a trump, discards two clubs on the A-K of spades, and the battle is over.

The suggested method of play wins far more often than the one declarer attempted. It succeeds in practically every case when the trumps are divided 2-2, as well as in the great majority of cases when they are divided 3-1 or 4-0.

It may seem odd to deliberately lose a trump trick when you have such powerful trumps, but sacrificing the trump trick is surely worthwhile when the play is practically certain to achieve the desired result, namely, making the contract.

What Should She Do If Baby Isn't A Girl?

DEAR ABBY: I am expecting my fourth child in May. My husband and I already have three boys, and of course we'd like to have a little girl this time because four is my limit.

My husband constantly tells me and everyone else he sees that if I don't have a girl this time, he will "divorce" me (He's only kidding of course, but it hurts me to hear it just the same.)

He has gone out and bought a lot of pink baby clothes, and he's even ordered baby furniture in pink! On Valentine's Day he sent me a card, saying, "THINK PINK."

What should I give this expert needler for Father's Day in case I have another boy?

P. G.

DEAR P.G.: A pink EYE!

DEAR ABBY: My husband grew up in a family of kissers. They were constantly giving each other (and everybody else) long, enthusiastic kisses on the mouth whenever the occasion arose.

I have asked my husband not to kiss our preteen daughters this way, and he thinks I am strange for feeling as I do. Abby, I have absolutely no objection to kissing friends and relatives on the cheek, but I save my mouth-to-mouth kisses for my husband.

When he kissed a young woman friend of mine on the lips last evening as a friendly greeting, she looked embarrassed. When I mentioned it to him later, he said, "Nonsense! It's time you shook your Victorian morals and joined the modern world."

Where do you stand, Abby?

STIFF UPPER LIP

DEAR STIFF: With you. The mouth is an erogenous zone, reserved for one's lover — or for mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

The Adventures Of Inese

AMERICAN ABROAD . . . in Goa.

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

She has crewed on a yacht from Fiji to Australia, traveled to more than 14 countries, hiked up 14,500 feet to see Mt. Everest, lived in a Zen commune in Japan and been booted out of two countries by communists.

Inese Civkulis has experienced firsthand more adventures in her 28 years than the rest of us Walter Mittys of the world do in a lifetime of daydreams.

Eight years ago the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aleksander Civkulis, 3925 N. 70th St., left Northwestern University and like many of her generation headed west — "I heard the call of the wild, of San Francisco."

Later her travels took her to Alaska where she worked to make enough money for the first leg of her trip further west — to the Orient, the South Pacific Islands, Australia, Southeast Asia.

Bali Before Tourists

She spent four months teaching English as a foreign language in a small private school on Tonga, discovered Bali before the tourists hit, when there were only three shacks as restaurants and four tiny hotels. While there she saved the life of a young Japanese woman who almost drowned.

She sold a few articles and pictures (small time, she calls them) and met an abundance of new friends of varying hues and nationalities.

"I thought I was a traveler," said Ms. Civkulis. That was before she made a second visit to Laos, landed a job teaching English in the Lao-American Association school in Vientien.

Stayed 2 Years

Once there, she "got hooked," stayed for two years until the communists closed the school.

She grew to love her job, rose steadily from teacher to administrative assistant, enjoyed the sophistication and night life of the former French provincial capital, met many interesting people and made many friends.

"I was respected and besides I was blonde. I was someone special," Ms. Civkulis recalls.

Then the communists came and the king was deposed. Most Americans and some Laotians fled the country, but Ms. Civkulis stayed on.

The communists banned rock music, western dancing, night clubs, jeans, all western clothes. Only the native skirt — the sinh — was allowed, and only cotton sinhs — no silk.

The Pathet Lao banned walking at night, television, radio from Thailand, movies not dubbed in Laotian.

Thai Border Closed

A border incident closed the Thai border, where many supplies crossed the Laos. Soon there was no gas, milk, sugar, detergent. About a fourth of the stores closed.

The Lao-American school enrollment dropped from 2,000 to 250.

But the young American woman stayed on.

The Pathet Lao communists organized neighborhoods into small groups of about 10 families with a resident Pathet Lao soldier to instruct ("watch is what I call it") the families, Ms. Civkulis explained.

Taught Communism

The people were taught communist philosophy, learned patriotic songs and dances.

The victory celebrations, played in the news media across the world, were orchestrated by the communists. Civilians were taught arm salutes and proper chants; attendance was required, she said.

Ms. Civkulis never saw any violence, though she heard gun shots at night and knew of Laotions considered "American lackies" who were sent away for "political re-education. "No one who went away has come back yet," she said.

The rumors were varied. Some said re-education was working or studying; others said the people cleared mine fields. Still others said they were just shot.

But the communist propaganda had appeal. Ms. Civkulis said. The communists promised freedom, equality, no corruption, a return to Laotian tradition.

Many of the Laotians were not politically aware; they had no idea what was happening until the communists "took the king down," she said.

Children Berated

"Then out in the country many of the older people . . . berated their sons, saying 'you lost our country, our heritage'," she said.

Though knowing that someday the school would be closed. Ms. Civkulis did not leave.

"My life was in Laos. I had a lot of friends there, and it meant a lot to them that we stayed," she explained.

She was also "tremendously interested in seeing what was going to happen."

And she never felt in danger.

Auld Lang Syne

New Year's Eve the ban against western songs and dancing was lifted for the evening. With some friends Ms. Civkulis went to a local hotel for a celebration, then returned to her home to finish the evening dancing to western music.

Unknown to her, five Pathet Lao officials were among the guests. The men went out to get fruit salad and wine, then returned to give Ms. Civkulis her "first political lesson."

The men were not hostile, she said. And they explained that they did not dislike Americans, only the government, the CIA and the imperialists.

For months the school continued operation. "They probably didn't even know about us," guessed Ms. Civkulis.

But when the takeover finally came this January, "they were pretty decent about it."

News of the closure came just at the end of the term but the communists allowed the school to remain open a few more days so the students could finish final exams for the term and pick up their grades.

Staff Given Week

Then the staff was given a week to clear personal papers out of the office.

For Ms. Civkulis, born in Germany to Latvian parents, this was the second time she had been forced to leave a country by communists.

Late last month Ms. Civkulis came back to Lincoln for a visit and a rest.

"I didn't want to go on to another adventure. I wanted to make sure Laos stayed, that I remembered it the way it was . . . to have it momentous.

"I don't want to leave it just behind . . . I can't exactly explain . . . I have a lot of friends there," and her voice trailed off.

What is next for this 1966 valedictorian from Pius High School. Perhaps study at the East-West Center in Hawaii, finishinl a degree in journalism or maybe even a business degree.

"Of course if someone offers me an exciting job. I wouldn't pass up a golden opportunity."

Tax Time Has Its Lighter Side

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

When it comes time to calculate income tax deductions, most Lincolnites aren't a bit shy. They want to take them off, ALL off.

Executives want to deduct their tailored suits as business expenses; women try to write off their cosmetics and most everyone, it seems, wants to claim his pet as a dependent.

Fortunately the people who prepare and check over tax returns have a sense of humor.

Ken Guest, manager of the Lincoln office of the Internal Revenue Service, hasn't heard everything yet but he just might before April 15 rolls around.

> "A dime is a dollar with the taxes removed."

Recently a woman came into the IRS office with a list of medical deductions almost as long as the instructions for the "simple" form.

The problem was she didn't have receipts to prove her doctor bills were legitimate.

"She wanted to show us her scars," Guest recalled. "She did have the evidence, I guess, but not the bills."

Another taxpayer insisted on claiming her as-yet-unborn baby as a deduction her 1975 return. Evidence or no, Guest nixed that deduction.

Most people today are very polite, the taxman said.

In the past, however, a tax collector's job has been a bit sticky at times.

In 1794, irate taxpayers tarred and feathered an agent sent to collect excise taxes on whisky, snuff, sugar and slaves.

Many people believe the IRS hasn't forgiven us yet.

Local tax preparers say the average citizen isn't trying to defraud the government.

But when in doubt, they deduct. Sometimes it works, other times . . . well . . .

Mike Busque, an agent for ABC Income Tax Service, recalled questioning a man about contributions to local charities. The man said he had given $100 worth of used clothing and furniture to the Goodwill and Salvation Army.

Did he have a receipt?

"No," the client said, "but I think it was about $100."

"Are you sure?" Busque queried.

"Yes."

"If the IRS audits this return," Busque warned, "you would have to produce some evidence . . .

"I didn't even get the last words out before the guy changed his mind and said, 'I guess it was only $10.' "

Bob Bryant of Benson-Bryant accountants said people often get a notion they can deduct certain things and try to do it year after year.

One year a client deducted a reasonable amount for two lawnmowers he gave Goodwill, Bryant recalled. The next year the same man said he had again given two lawnmowers away.

"I guess he got away with it once and decided it was worth a second try."

Casualty losses seem to see a lot of action this time of year.

A local tax consultant said he once filed a return for a woman who raised worms. One year all her breeder worms died and she wrote them off as a casualty loss. It was legitimate.

A homeowner in the Piedmont area lost several beautiful pine trees on her property due to fire. She claimed a casualty loss of $700 apiece.

Glayne Doolittle's favorite story is about the farmer who claimed a loss because his cow died.

"Most cows will die if you cut them up and put them in the freezer," Doolittle said.

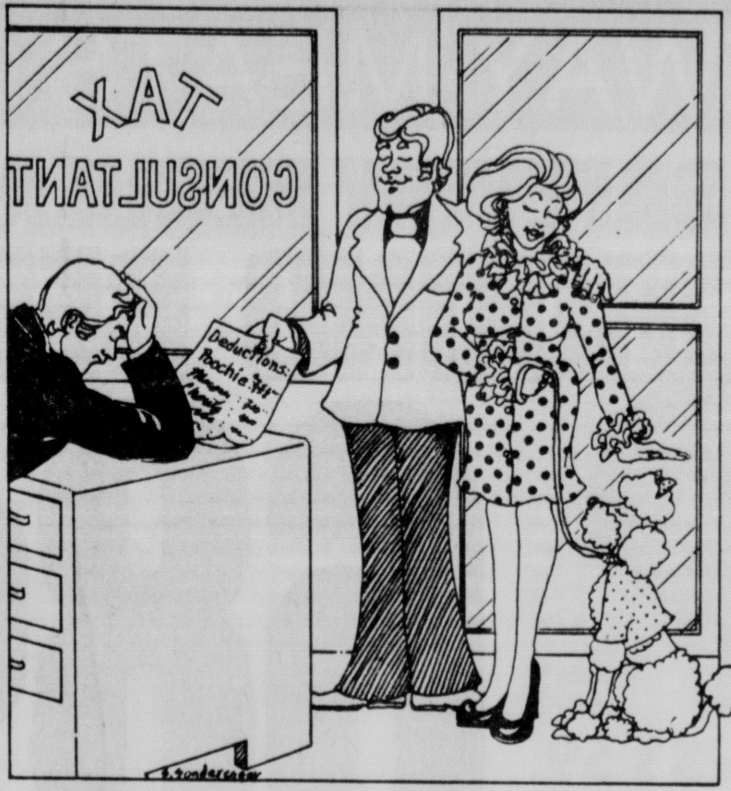
Ron Witt, a part-time agent for Associates Financial Services, said most taxpayers know the IRS will spot any attempt to pad expenses. Instead they "forget" to add in all outside income.

> "A taxpayer is a person who doesn't have to take a Civil Service exam to work for the federal government."

Witt said he has yet to file a return for a gambler who reports any earnings from the horse races.

"The races are in town an awfully long time," he added. "I've wondered about that."

Busque said many people don't realize they have to claim prizes, such as television sets or cars won in drawings. But as they say in the tax business, "The Lord giveth and the IRS taketh away."



Bryant said a few of his clients try to deduct tuition they pay to send their children to college.

"Some of them get really mad when I won't put it down," he said. "Maybe they've already put three kids through college that way and the IRS never caught it."

Probably the most taxing situation for a consultant is to file a return for a "divorcing" couple.

Nebraska's six-month waiting period often means people are legally still married and "madder than hops at each other" when it comes time to file their return, Doolittle said.

He said he tries to play marriage counselor long enough to get both parties to sign a joint statement. If they refuse and file separately, they may pay an average of $300 to $400 more.

Bryant said one divorcing couple came to him because "they didn't want to have one more argument" over money.

Witt said it's common for divorcees filing separately for the first time to both claim their children as dependents.

Rather than cross the battlelines, Witt "lets the IRS decide who gets the kids."

If they're not split up before, couples might be considering it during or after their session with the taxman.

"Probably the thing we find most with people is instant hostility between husbands and wives," said Mary Burr of Burr's Income Tax Service.

> "The taxpayer will be the first natural resource to be exhausted."

"One will say, 'I thought you kept track of this,' and the other will say, 'No, I thought you were handling it.' "

Sound familiar?

One of the best tell-tale stories in a tax preparer's notebook comes from Bryant.

Bryant confessed that "at least a half dozen people every year try to pay me in cash so I won't have to claim the fees on my own income tax."

Kindness Passed On By Grandma Hanby

Today's contributor to "Write On" is a 20-year Lincoln resident who works in the produce department of a local supermarket He worked for many years with youth in the YMCA, Regional Center and State Home for Children.

By GLENN CROOKS

I grew up on a farm in northwest Iowa As a boy I raised popcorn and geese to earn my spending money My dad furnished the feed and I the work This was my only income and during the depression years I worked hard so I could buy my own clothes and relieve the family of some financial burdens There were six of us children

Now to have a good flock of geese I needed a good gander the male of the flock I had saved my money a dollar and seventy-five cents as I remember, and I knew just where I wanted to purchase my prize stock

Down the road I went to Grandma Hanby, as everyone called her She had canaries, kittens, puppies, ducks and geese, so many things that were interesting to a child As usual we made the rounds to see all interesting creatures and then I made known my request She agreed that I could pick out what I thought was the best and I did We put him in a gunny sack with his head protruding through the hole we had cut for that purpose

I gathered my coins and asked how much she would sell the gander for She then informed me that she would not take a cent But I couldn t take him home without paying, my dad would send me right back Well, she said for me to tell my dad what she was about to tell me and he would understand

She said when she was a little girl she raised turkeys and also needed a male for her flock A kindly lady had given her a gobler and told her when she grew up to do something nice for a boy or girl and to remind them to pass it on So she was passing it on to me and hoped I would do the same

When I got home my dad asked how much I paid and upon finding out I paid nothing he informed me I would have to return the beautiful creature But I told dad what Grandma Hanby had said and with a twinkle in his eye he agreed

Years later I moved to Lincoln My sister who lives in Iowa informed me by letter that Grandma Hanby was celebrating her 90th birthday. I quickly went to the card shop and purchased a birthday card I wrote a note in it, congratulating her on her 90th birthday and reminded her of the wonderful thing she had done for me years ago I explained how it had been such a wonderful lesson to me and to the ones I had passed the story and deed on to over the years. I signed my name and underneath I wrote "A boy who remembered"

My sister was at the birthday party for Grandma Hanby and the mail that day brought my card Grandma read it and sat down in the midst of her friends and wrote me

I have the card and letter she sent, in my book of treasures In this letter she told how she had forgotten the incident, but was delighted to know she had done something for someone and they had remembered.

Over the years I have told this story and have tried to keep my promise to Grandma Hanby To me it was true giving on her part for she had forgotten the incident

What a wonderful world this would be if everyone passed on the little kindnesses they receive to someone else and that someone did the same.

What Should She Do If Baby Isn't A Girl?

DEAR ABBY I am expecting my fourth child in May My husband and I already have three boys and of course we'd like to have a little girl this time because four is my limit

My husband constantly tells me and everyone else he sees that if I don t have a girl this time he will ' divorce me (He s only kidding of course, but it hurts me to hear it just the same)

He has gone out and bought a lot of pink baby clothes, and he s even ordered baby furniture in pink! On Valentine s Day he sent me a card, saying, "THINK PINK

What should I give this expert needler for Father's Day in case I have another boy?

P G

DEAR P.G.: A pink EYE!

DEAR ABBY My husband grew up in a family of kissers They were constantly giving each other (and everybody else) long enthusiastic kisses on the mouth whenever the occasion arose

I have asked my husband not to kiss our preteen daughters this way, and he thinks I am strange for feeling as I do Abby, I have absolutely no objection to kissing friends and relatives on the cheek, but I save my mouth-to-mouth kisses for my husband

When he kissed a young woman friend of mine on the lips last evening as a friendly greeting, she looked embarrassed When I mentioned it to him later, he said, "Nonsense' It's time you shook your Victorian morals and joined the modern world "

Where do you stand, Abby?

STIFF UPPER LIP

DEAR STIFF: With you. The mouth is an erogenous zone, reserved for one's lover — or for mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Opening lead - king of hearts.

There is nothing unusual about declarer having a choice of two or more different methods of play. In exercising that choice, he should of course select the method of play that offers the best chance of success. South neglected to do so in this deal, and it cost him the contract.

He won the heart head with the ace, cashed the A-K of clubs, and continued with a club. West won with the nine, cashed the queen of hearts, and continued with the jack of clubs. When dummy ruffed with the seven, East overruffed with the ten and South finished down one.

The correct play is to lead a low trump to dummy at trick two! This loses a trump trick unnecessarily, but the trick comes back with interest.

East wins dummy's seven with the ten and returns a heart, but that is the end of the road for the defense. Whatever West plays, South enters dummy with a trump, discards two clubs on the A-K of spades, and the battle is over.

The suggested method of play wins far more often than the one declarer attempted. It succeeds in practically every case when the trumps are divided 2-2, as well as in the great majority of cases when they are divided 3-1 or 4-0.

It may seem odd to deliberately lose a trump trick when you have such powerful trumps, but sacrificing the trump trick is surely worthwhile when the play is practically certain to achieve the desired result, namely, making the contract.

MILK GROUP

Many of today's diets are low in calcium because we don't use enough calcium-rich foods, such as milk and cheese, in our diets. Growing children need calcium to build bones and teeth, especially during teen years, when children are growing fast.

Adults, too, need calcium even though they're not building bones and teeth. Each day, adults lose some calcium and must replace it. Calcium helps clot blood when you cut or injure yourself; it helps keep all your muscles in good shape so they can work for you . . . especially the heart muscles.

Milk is our leading source of calcium. It also provides high-quality protein, riboflavin, vitamin A (if milk is whole or fortified), and other nutrients. Protein in milk builds and repairs body tissues, helps the body fight infection, and supplies energy. Eight ounces of fresh whole milk has about 160 calories; the same amount of skim milk has only 90 calories.

Foods Included in the Milk Group: Milk: fluid whole, evaporated, skim, dry, buttermilk. Cheese: cottage, cream, cheddar type, natural or processed. Ice cream. Yogurt.

Recommended Amounts: Some milk daily is urged for almost everyone. Recommended amounts in terms of 8-ounce cups (or glasses) of whole fluid milk are: children under 9, 2 - 3 cups; children 9 - 12, 3 or more cups; teenagers, 4 or more cups; adults, 2 or more cups; pregnant women, 3 or more; nursing mothers, 4 or more. Part of all the milk may be fluid skim milk, buttermilk, evaporated milk or dry milk.

Cheese, ice cream and yogurt can be used in place of part of the milk. The amount of any of these it will take to replace a given amount of milk is figured on the basis of calcium content. On this basis, examples are: 1-inch cube cheddar-type cheese equals ½ cup milk; ½ cup cottage cheese equals ⅓ cup milk; 2 tablespoons cream cheese equals 1 tablespoon milk; ½ cup ice cream equals ⅓ cup milk; 1 cup plain yogurt equals 1 cup milk; 1 cup fruit-flavored yogurt equals ¾ cup milk.

Tax Time Has Its Lighter Side

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

When it comes time to calculate income tax deductions, most Lincolnites aren't a bit shy. They want to take them off, ALL off.

Executives want to deduct their tailored suits as business expenses; women try to write off their cosmetics and most everyone, it seems, wants to claim his pet as a dependent.

Fortunately the people who prepare and check over tax returns have a sense of humor.

Ken Guest, manager of the Lincoln office of the Internal Revenue Service, hasn't heard everything yet but he just might before April 15 rolls around.

> "A dime is a dollar with the taxes removed."

Recently a woman came into the IRS office with a list of medical deductions almost as long as the instructions for the "simple" form.

The problem was she didn't have receipts to prove her doctor bills were legitimate.

"She wanted to show us her scars," Guest recalled. "She did have the evidence, I guess, but not the bills."

Another taxpayer insisted on claiming her as-yet-unborn baby as a deduction her 1975 return. Evidence or no, Guest nixed that deduction.

Most people today are very polite, the taxman said.

In the past, however, a tax collector's job has been a bit sticky at times.

In 1794, irate taxpayers tarred and feathered an agent sent to collect excise taxes on whisky, snuff, sugar and slaves.

Many people believe the IRS hasn't forgiven us yet.

Local tax preparers say the average citizen isn't trying to defraud the government.

But when in doubt, they deduct. Sometimes it works, other times . . well . . .

Mike Busque, an agent for ABC Income Tax Service, recalled questioning a man about contributions to local charities. The man said he had given $100 worth of used clothing and furniture to the Goodwill and Salvation Army

Did he have a receipt?

"No," the client said, "but I think it was about $100."

"Are you sure?" Busque queried.

"Yes."

"If the IRS audits this return," Busque warned, "you would have to produce some evidence . . .

"I didn't even get the last words out before the guy changed his mind and said, 'I guess it was only $10.' "

Bob Bryant of Benson-Bryant accountants said people often get a notion they can deduct certain things and try to do it year after year.

One year a client deducted a reasonable amount for two lawnmowers he gave Goodwill, Bryant recalled. The next year the same man said he had again given two lawnmowers away.

"I guess he got away with it once and decided it was worth a second try."

Casualty losses seem to see a lot of action this time of year.

A local tax consultant said he once filed a return for a woman who raised worms. One year all her breeder worms died and she wrote them off as a casualty loss. It was legitimate.

A homeowner in the Piedmont area lost several beautiful pine trees on her property due to fire. She claimed a casualty loss of $700 apiece.

Glayne Doolittle's favorite story is about the farmer who claimed a loss because his cow died.

"Most cows will die if you cut them up and put them in the freezer," Doolittle said.

Ron Witt, a part-time agent for Associates Financial Services, said most taxpayers know the IRS will spot any attempt to pad expenses. Instead they "forget" to add in all outside income.

> "A taxpayer is a person who doesn't have to take a Civil Service exam to work for the federal government."

Witt said he has yet to file a return for a gambler who reports any earnings from the horse races.

"The races are in town an awfully long time," he added. "I've wondered about that."

Busque said many people don't realize they have to claim prizes, such as television sets or cars won in drawings. But as they say in the tax business, "The Lord giveth and the IRS taketh away."

TAX CONSULTANT
Deductions: Poochie's Vet

Bryant said a few of his clients try to deduct tuition they pay to send their children to college.

"Some of them get really mad when I won't put it down," he said. "Maybe they've already put three kids through college that way and the IRS never caught it."

Probably the most taxing situation for a consultant is to file a return for a "divorcing" couple.

Nebraska's six-month waiting period often means people are legally still married and "madder than hops at each other" when it comes time to file their return, Doolittle said.

He said he tries to play marriage counselor long enough to get both parties to sign a joint statement. If they refuse and file separately, they may pay an average of $300 to $400 more.

Bryant said one divorcing couple came to him because "they didn't want to have one more argument" over money.

Witt said it's common for divorcees filing separately for the first time to both claim their children as dependents.

Rather than cross the battlelines, Witt "lets the IRS decide who gets the kids."

If they're not split up before, couples might be considering it during or after their session with the taxman.

"Probably the thing we find most with people is instant hostility between husbands and wives," said Mary Burr of Burr's Income Tax Service

> "The taxpayer will be the first natural resource to be exhausted."

"One will say, 'I thought you kept track of this,' and the other will say, 'No, I thought you were handling it.' "

Sound familiar?

One of the best tell-tale stories in a tax preparer's notebook comes from Bryant.

Bryant confessed that "at least a half dozen people every year try to pay me in cash so I won't have to claim the fees on my own income tax."

U.S. Millimetering Toward Change

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — You know politicians — give 'em an inch and they'll take 1.6 kilometers. Last December, President Ford signed the Metric Conversion Act, which will encourage increased use of the metric system throughout the U.S. Sooner or later we'll all have to face it — jogging in kilometers, dieting in kilograms, cooking in milliliters, and hoping the heat in August won't go over 30 degrees.

The metric system was developed in France in the 1790's, as a more logical and internally consistent way of treating weights and measures than the British inches-feet-pounds. And indeed it is. Like our decimal approach to numbers, everything in metrics is build on blocks of 10. This makes it easy to manipulate the system mathematically, a great advantage to engineering and technology.

Metrics spread rapidly throughout the non-English speaking world, and recently even Britain, Canada and Australia gave up the fight. Only the U.S. and a handful of tiny countries resisted it. Because of its practical use, the metric system was legalized for the U.S. in 1866 — but not until recently has it started inching (millimetering?) its way into our daily lives.

If you have a child in school, he probably knows already that a meter is a little more than a yard; a kilogram is a little more than two pounds; a liter is a little more than a quart. As with any thought system, it's easier when you start young.

Some signs of metric conversion may be virtually invisible to you. For example, most canned goods now carry the weight in both ounces and grams. You can buy measuring cups with ounces on one side and milliliters on the other. But "soft" conversions like this don't make any impact, because you don't have to use them. The real test won't come until you have to ask for a liter of this and a kilogram of that, and know in advance how much you'll get.

Some products have already made the full conversion to metric — by which I mean that no British-system equivalent exists. Photographers, for example, have no question about the size of 35 millimeter film. You can drive a 1.6 liter Chevette, break your leg on 180-centimeter skis, smoke 120 millimeter cigarettes, and banish headaches with a 350-milligram aspirin tablet. Half-liter bottles of Seven-Up and Coca-Cola are in test markets.

Companies already involved in metric conversion include General Motors, United States Steel, IBM, Squibb, Otis Elevator, Caterpillar Tractor, J.C. Penney, General Foods and Xerox. My associate Anne Wolman spoke with some of the companies involved:

Cars — Everett L. Baugh, executive engineer in charge of General Motors' metric system, says that the costs of conversion have been greatly exaggerated. The Chevette is virtually all metric; when tooling up, they simply used metric measures rather than standard ones. From now on all new-model GM cars will be metrically tooled. You'll probably never notice unless you repair cars yourself, in which case you'll have to ask your hardware store for metric wrenches. Nowadays, around 25% of all wrenches and drill bits sold have metric standards.

Retailing — Sears will start adding metric equivalents to some of its menswear lines this year. A man's shirt with a 15-inch collar and 35-inch sleeves will also be labeled "35-90," the latter being centimeters. Women's clothing will take longer to convert, because sizes are not as standard.

Food — Industry committees are examining what the standard sizes of new packages should be, with the object of making the changeover as easy as possible. They'll probably still consider a half-cup a "serving," although it will be half a metric cup (fractionally larger than the present one). Recipes will be measured in metric teaspoons and tablespoons, but most cooks won't notice the difference. Julia Child's new cookbook, "From Julia Child's Kitchen," includes an 11-page conversion section.

Driving — Many states are moving toward metric road signs in some cases starting with state parks.

It will be more than 10 years before conversion is official, but it's not too early to start thinking about it. After all, 28.35 grams of prevention are worth 453.6 of cure. By the time the system takes over, enough metric items should have crept into your life to make the transition easy.

Mortgage Loan Rates Plummet To 2-Year Low

The interest rate on a home mortgage is now at the lowest level in two years, according to Lincoln loan officers.

The interest rate on an 80% mortgage has dipped to 8¾% at most local savings and loan companies.

Six months ago, the interest rate on an 80% conventional loan hit 9½% in the Lincoln area.

The interest rate peak came a few months after a state 11% usury ceiling went into effect. A strong winter flow of money into savings accounts has apparently outpaced loan demand.

Judge Dismisses One Charge In Grain Scheme Swindle Case

Omaha (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Robert V. Denney Tuesday dismissed one of the remaining four charges against a former Oklahoma bank president originally indicted in a $360,000 scheme to defraud outstate Nebraska grain dealers.

Donald Marley, former president of the Sequoyah State Bank of Muldrow, Okla., was expected to take the stand in his own defense Wednesday after the government rested its case late Tuesday.

"I fully expect my client to take the stand," said Marley's attorney, Thomas C. McQuade of Omaha, following Tuesday's session, "Unless something drastic happens between now and Wednesday."

Denney granted a motion by McQuade to drop a charge of wire fraud against Marley filed in connection with an alleged $27,763 grain swindle in Cozad.

Still remaining are a charge of interstate transportation of fraudulently obtained grain relating to the Cozad transaction and two charges, one of wire fraud and another of interstate transportation, relating to a $56,000 grain transaction in York.

Both interstate transportation charges relate to aiding and abetting the shipments, and the government expects Denney to drop the one relating to the Cozad incident. The wire fraud count that Denney dismissed was necessary to prove the transportation charge.

The defense has stipulated a fradulent scheme did in fact exist, but contends Marley, one of 15 Oklahomans indicted on 47 counts by a federal grand jury in Omaha last Aug. 8, wasn't involved in it.

Marley was dismissed from his job at the bank shortly after the indictment was returned.

Other Cases Settled

Through plea bargaining, the remaining defendants have either pleaded guilty or no contest to misdemeanor counts or have had the charges against them dismissed.

The government's case suffered a setback in January when the key defendant, Elvin Woody, Sallisaw, Okla., was allegedly shot to death by Spencer Coffman, also of Sallisaw, during an incident in Oklahoma. During a fight which proceeded the shooting, Woody allegedly shot and killed Joe Gibson, Coffman's brother-in-law.

During testimony Tuesday, Cozad banker Clifford Young testified he was given a name with a number on it by several of the defendants in which to verify money in an account at the Sequoyah State Bank.

Young testified he called the number and asked for the bank president, but couldn't remember the name of the president or the name of the person he talked with.

Identification Needed

Young's positive identification was necessary for the government to prove the two Cozad counts.

Another banker, Marion Bonham of York, did, however, identify Marley as the person he spoke to by telephone during a querry similar to Young's.

On both occasions, however, the checks in question were terminated at the Sequoyah State Bank.

Mrs. Joann Vest, an assistant cashier at the bank, testified Tuesday that on one day alone, Woody terminated seven checks, but on other occasions, checks were allowed to clear the bank.

She said Marley granted permission for Woody to take check termination cards out of the bank where they were allegedly signed by a person named Richard Allen, who the government contends never existed.

Cash In Bag

Mrs. Vest testified Woody opened an account in the name of Redwood Farms of Sallisaw on October of 1974. She said Woody was carrying $100,000 in cash in a paper bag.

Mrs. Vest said she was instructed by Woody to never give out the balance in the account by telephone, even if it was requested by Woody or his wife, Mary, who was also indicated. The charges against her were dismissed.

Woody subsequently closed the Redwood Farms account and established another under the name of "G & R Grain."

The Initials "G & R" are said to stand for "Grab and Run."

Business Gains Lift Stock Mart

New York (AP) — Reports of a jump in housing starts and other gains in business activity perked up a sluggish stock market Tuesday, pushing prices higher in increased trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 8.97 to 983.47, bouncing back from a 28.81-point slide over the two previous sessions.

Advances outnumbered declines by about a 5-3 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume rose to 22.78 million shares from Monday's 2½-month low of 19.57 million.

Activity had been quiet and indecisive until midafternoon, when the Commerce Department issued a flurry of economic reports.

One showed a 27 per cent jump in housing starts in February from the month before — a figure that was "much better than expected," in the words of Eldon A. Grimm at Birr, Wilson & Co.

Another listed a 1.1 per cent gain in business sales during January, with an accompaning .5 per cent rise in inventories.

At this tage of the business cycle, with the economy trying to work its way out of the recession, a buildup in inventories is takenas a sign of increased confidnece among business managers.

Later in the day, the Federal Reserve reported that industrial production registered its 10th straight monthly increase in February.

Although the London stock market feel sharply on British Prime Minister Harold Wilson's surprise announcement of plans to resign, the news seemed to have little impact on U.S. stock prices.

Among homebuilding stocks, U.S. Home and Kaufman & Broad each picked up nearly a point to rank among the day's best percentage gainers.

The Big Three automakers' shares all pikced up ground following bright early-March car sales reports on Monday.

General Motors rose more than a point and Ford and Chrysler tacked on fractions.

Citicorp posted a point-sized gain in active trading. The financial holding company raised its dividend.

American Finance System jumped from 3⅞ to above the 6 level on word of merger plans with Beneficial Corp., under which beneficial would pay $7.50 apiece for American Finance shares.

Beneficial stock was off a fraction.

Youngstown Steel Door, off more than a point, was the biggest percentage loser. The company projected a first quarter loss and omitted its dividend.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the day's most active issue, gained ground on turnover of better than 250,000 shares.

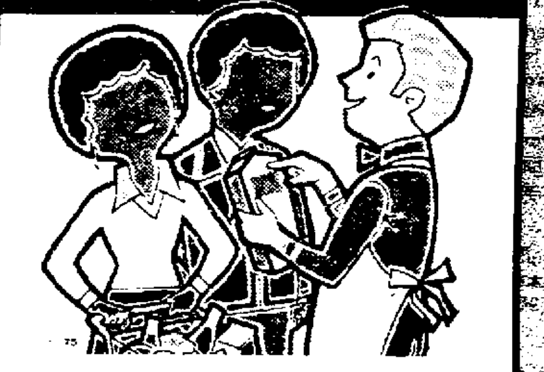
KNOW YOUR FOOD



MILK GROUP

Many of today's diets are low in calcium because we don't use enough calcium-rich foods, such as milk and cheese, in our diets. Growing children need calcium to build bones and teeth, especially during teen years, when children are growing fast.

Adults, too, need calcium even though they're not building bones and teeth. Each day, adults lose some calcium and must replace it. Calcium helps clot blood when you cut or injure yourself; it helps keep all your muscles in good shape so they can work for you . . . especially the heart muscles.

Milk is our leading source of calcium. It also provides high-quality protein, riboflavin, vitamin A (if milk is whole or fortified), and other nutrients. Protein in milk builds and repairs body tissues, helps the body fight infection, and supplies energy. Eight ounces of fresh whole milk has about 160 calories; the same amount of skim milk has only 90 calories.

Foods Included in the Milk Group: Milk: fluid whole, evaporated, skim, dry, buttermilk. Cheese: cottage, cream, cheddar type, natural or processed. Ice cream. Yogurt.

Recommended Amounts. Some milk daily is urged for almost everyone. Recommended amounts in terms of 8-ounce cups (or glasses) of whole fluid milk are: children under 9, 2 - 3 cups; children 9 - 12, 3 or more cups, teenagers, 4 or more cups, adults, 2 or more cups, pregnant women, 3 or more; nursing mothers, 4 or more. Part of all the milk may be fluid skim milk, buttermilk, evaporated milk or dry milk.

Cheese, ice cream and yogurt can be used in place of part of the milk. The amount of any of these it will take to replace a given amount of milk is figured on the basis of calcium content. On this basis, examples are: 1-inch cube cheddar-type cheese equals ½ cup milk, ½ cup cottage cheese equals ⅓ cup milk, 2 tablespoons cream cheese equals 1 tablespoon milk, ½ cup ice cream equals ⅓ cup milk, 1 cup plain yogurt equals 1 cup milk, 1 cup fruit-flavored yogurt equals ¾ cup milk.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR
is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, March 17

Gemini women captivate through their intellectual curiosity, their ability to discuss a variety of subjects. In the past, my two favorites born under this sign were Judy Garland and Marilyn Monroe. The Gemini woman gesticulates, has wonderful sense of humor and, if single, could marry in 1976. If already married, there could be an addition to family. Many women born under Gemini will find that Cancer and Capricorn persons play key roles in their lives in 1976.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Defer decisions that encompass legal commitments. Wait and see. Permit partner or mate to fully express views. You gain most by organizing, preparing rather than through any direct course of action. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finish rather than initiate project. Examine possibilities of ridding self of burden. Being a sacrificial lamb would not be constructive. Insist on your fair share — of credit and cash. Libra is likely to be in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Persons who usually acted in predictable manner are apt to "kick up their heels." Includes children — and lovers. Nothing is to remain the same — status quo takes a beating. Work procedures are reviewed, revised, turned inside-out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Excitement featured. Home base is site for most activity. Study Gemini message. New starts, independence and creative endeavors grab spotlight—along with fact that you could fall madly in love. What a time!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Social activity accelerates. Forces tend to be scattered. Opportunities abound. Key is to be selective. Expand horizons. Watch diet. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals could be in picture. Restless associate should not be taken too seriously.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be willing to revise, review, to recapitulate, recall and to throw out the flimsy in favor of solid material. Utilize discipline, wisdom to achieve goal. Scorpio, Taurus and Leo persons play "remembered roles."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cycle high — money roadblock is removed. Message is answered — prestige rises as result. One who had been elusive, evasive and even "disgusting," does about-face. You'll be in driver's seat. Be firm but gracious, too.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are able to get things done in a more efficient manner — because your requests, suggestions are heeded. You have "inside information." Let others know you are not without allies. Refuse to again be a doormat for any person!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar cycle is such that a friend makes a timely appearance, comes up with remarkable program and helps you to be happy. You gain inner strength. Vision improves — in literal and spiritual sense. You'll remember this day!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on goals, relationship with professional associate, superior. Key is to organize, to bring priorities into focus. Some of your natural talents, qualities are spotlighted, appreciated and rewarded. Member of opposite sex is involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Long-distance, long ago, far away, philosophy and education — these areas receive more-than-ordinary attention. Open lines of communication. Publish and correspond. Finish tasks, assignments. Be confident in ultimate goals. Aries, Libra figure in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Creative juices flow; your style is imprinted. Those who took you for granted take a second look. Leo, Scorpio and Aquarius figure prominently. Money, as it affects partner or mate, is a major consideration.

IF MARCH 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are emotional, creative, tough in a crisis, tender at other times, somewhat of a dilemma to others, but mostly to yourself. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. January and October are your most significant months of 1976. A disappointment will boomerang in your favor.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Kindness Passed On By Grandma Hanby

write on

Today's contributor to "Write On" is a 20-year Lincoln resident who works in the produce department of a local supermarket. He worked for many years with youth in the YMCA, Regional Center and State Home for Children.

By GLENN CROOKS

I grew up on a farm in northwest Iowa. As a boy I raised popcorn and geese to earn my spending money. My dad furnished the feed and I the work. This was my only income and during the depression years I worked hard so I could buy my own clothes and relieve the family of some financial burdens. There were six of us children.

Now to have a good flock of geese, I needed a good gander, the male of the flock. I had saved my money, a dollar and seventy-five cents as I remember, and I knew just where I wanted to purchase my prize stock.

Down the road I went to Grandma Hanby, as everyone called her. She had canaries, kittens, puppies, ducks and geese, so many things that were interesting to a child. As usual we made the rounds to see all interesting creatures and then I made known my request. She agreed that I could pick out what I thought was the best and I did. We put him in a gunny sack with his head protruding through the hole we had cut for that purpose.

I gathered my coins and asked how much she would sell the gander for. She then informed me that she would not take a cent. But I couldn't take him home without paying, my dad would send me right back. Well, she said for me to tell my dad what she was about to tell me and he would understand.

She said when she was a little girl she raised turkeys and also needed a male for her flock. A kindly lady had given her a gobler and told her when she grew up to do something nice for a boy or girl and to remind them to pass it on. So she was passing it on to me and hoped I would do the same.

When I got home my dad asked how much I paid and upon finding out I paid nothing he informed me I would have to return the beautiful creature. But I told dad what Grandma Hanby had said and with a twinkle in his eye he agreed.

Years later I moved to Lincoln. My sister who lives in Iowa informed me by letter that Grandma Hanby was celebrating her 90th birthday. I quickly went to the card shop and purchased a birthday card. I wrote a note in it, congratulating her on her 90th birthday and reminded her of the wonderful thing she had done for me years ago. I explained how it had been such a wonderful lesson to me and to the ones I had passed the story and deed on to over the years. I signed my name and underneath I wrote: "A boy who remembered."

My sister was at the birthday party for Grandma Hanby and the mail that day brought my card. Grandma read it and sat down in the midst of her friends and wrote me.

I have the card and letter she sent, in my book of treasures. In this letter she told how she had forgotten the incident, but was delighted to know she had done something for someone and they had remembered.

Over the years I have told this story and have tried to keep my promise to Grandma Hanby. To me it was true giving on her part for she had forgotten the incident.

What a wonderful world this would be if everyone passed on the little kindnesses they receive to someone else and that someone did the same.

Opening lead - king of hearts.

There is nothing unusual about declarer having a choice of two or more different methods of play. In exercising that choice, he should of course select the method of play that offers the best chance of success. South neglected to do so in this deal, and it cost him the contract.

He won the heart head with the ace, cashed the A-K of clubs, and continued with a club. West won with the nine, cashed the queen of hearts, and continued with the jack of clubs. When dummy ruffed with the seven, East overruffed with the ten and South finished down one.

The correct play is to lead a low trump to dummy at trick two! This loses a trump trick unnecessarily, but the trick comes back with interest.

East wins dummy's seven with the ten and returns a heart, but that is the end of the road for the defense. Whatever West plays, South enters dummy with a trump, discards two clubs on the A-K of spades, and the battle is over.

The suggested method of play wins far more often than the one declarer attempted. It succeeds in practically every case when the trumps are divided 2-2, as well as in the great majority of cases when they are divided 3-1 or 4-0.

It may seem odd to deliberately lose a trump trick when you have such powerful trumps, but sacrificing the trump trick is surely worthwhile when the play is practically certain to achieve the desired result, namely, making the contract.

What Should She Do If Baby Isn't A Girl?

DEAR ABBY: I am expecting my fourth child in May. My husband and I already have three boys, and of course we'd like to have a little girl this time because four is my limit.

My husband constantly tells me and everyone else he sees that if I don't have a girl this time, he will "divorce" me (He's only kidding of course, but it hurts me to hear it just the same.)

He has gone out and bought a lot of pink baby clothes, and he's even ordered baby furniture in pink! On Valentine's Day he sent me a card, saying, "THINK PINK."

What should I give this expert needler for Father's Day in case I have another boy?

P. G.

DEAR P.G.: A pink EYE!

DEAR ABBY: My husband grew up in a family of kissers. They were constantly giving each other (and everybody else) long, enthusiastic kisses on the mouth whenever the occasion arose.

I have asked my husband not to kiss our preteen daughters this way, and he thinks I am strange for feeling as I do. Abby, I have absolutely no objection to kissing friends and relatives on the cheek, but I save my mouth-to-mouth kisses for my husband.

When he kissed a young woman friend of mine on the lips last evening as a friendly greeting, she looked embarrassed. When I mentioned it to him later, he said, "Nonsense! It's time you shook your Victorian morals and joined the modern world."

Where do you stand, Abby?

STIFF UPPER LIP

DEAR STIFF: With you. The mouth is an erogenous zone, reserved for one's lover — or for mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

NU Players Nip Coaches In Tilt

By VIRGIL PARKER

Despite the addition of three 'ringers' in the lineup and some officiating help in the closing moments, the Nebraska football coaches were unable to overcome a big halftime deficit and dropped a close 55-54 basketball decision to the NU football seniors at Lincoln High's Johnson Gym Tuesday night.

The coaches had huge John Dutton, the all-pro defensive end of the Balimore Colts; rugged Monte Johnson, the Oakland Raiders middle linebacker; and slick Jerry Tagge, the ex-Green Bay Packer quarterback who is headed for the Chicago Bears, in their lineup.

Tagge pumped in 13 points to pace a second-half comeback attempt. Dutton was a demon around the backboards, but the ex-South Dakota allstater was 0-7 from the free throw line (who would dare foul him?) to hurt the coaches cause.

But the players, behind some long-range accuracy by John O'Leary, Jimmy Burrow and a couple of fast-break buckets by Tom Heiser, regained the lead.

Dean Gissler sank a free throw with 14 seconds left to give the players a three-point edge and preserve the victory.

Husker head coach Tom Osborne, who also had eight points, was the only coach to find the range in the early going.

A preliminary game, pitting the coaches from Lincoln High, Southeast and Pius X against the coaches from Northeast and East Highs, was equally close.

Assistant Pius coach Tim Anderson hit a baseline shot at the final gun to give his side a 40-38 victory.

Players' Veto Imperils Start Of New Season

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — A ringing rejection by the major league players to the club owners' "final and best proposal" plunged the start of the 1976 baseball season into extreme peril Tuesday and cast grave doubt that any quick accord could be reached in the game's prolonged labor hassle.

For the first time, American League President Lee MacPhail admitted he was concerned about the baseball season opening on time, April 8.

Asked whether there was a chance the season now would not start on schedule, he said, "it's getting very close. Every hour this thing drags on places the start of the season in greater jeopardy."

The latest distressing setback in the negotiations came when the players refused to okay an owners' plan which would have technically given all 600 major leaguers the right to play out their options and become free agents with the expiration of their current contracts.

Key stumbling block was the so-called "liability issue" in which the owners would put an eight-team negotiating limit on the players playing out their options instead of all 24 as is now the case in the court-upheld Andy Messersmith decision.

MacPhail and the owners' chief negotiator, John Gaherin, both of whom departed for New York after one final brief pow-wow with the players, agreed the outlook was bleak.

"You can't be optimistic in the face of the attitude being displayed here by the players," said Gaherin. Added MacPhail: "We don't know what the next move is."

There was some speculation that baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn might yet step into the dispute and defy the owners by opening the locked spring training camps. But a spokesman for the commissioner said Kuhn would not make any statement until the Players' Executive Committee officially rejects the owners' proposal in Tampa Wednesday.

Still, the players and their union chief, Marvin Miller, made appeals to Kuhn to exercise his authority and get spring training underway.

"While it may be true we cannot possibly accept their proposal as they've presented," said Miller. "That is not to say there hasn't been progress made here. I believe Mr. Kuhn said that if progress were made he would order the camps open. Well, they're still closed so apparently he does not consider this progress."

Bob Boone, player representative for the Philadelphia Phillies, echoed Miller: "I'm appealing to the owners to get the commissioner to open the camps. It's not doing any good to the owners, the players or the fans to keep spring training closed."

Geographic Play, 64-Team NCAA Field Urged

Expand NCAA Tournament

Sports Signals

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

Abe Lemons, the new head basketball coach at Texas, will take over as president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches at the annual convention next week in Philadelphia.

One of his projects during his term of office, he says, will be to look into the possibility of arranging a post-season playoff for non-conference teams that don't make the 32-man field for the NCAA tournament.

There were quite a few schools overlooked in the selection process even though some of them had records better than conference winners that were automatic entrants. Among these were Boise State, 16-10, Western Kentucky, 17-8, and Wichita State, 18-9.

One of those was Abe's Pan American team, which finished 20-5 and had the nation's leading scorer in senior guard Marshall Roberts, who averaged 36.3 points a game. Others were North Texas State, 22-4, Florida State, 20-6, and Oral Roberts, 20-6.

Here's a suggestion that might solve that problem: Expand the NCAA tourney field to 64 teams and add one week to the three weekends it now takes to determine the national champion.

This could be done by simply doubling the number of subregional sites from eight to 16 and having eight subregionals the second weekend just as we have now. Obviously, to avoid confusion, new names would have to be given these competitions.

Sectional Competition Urged

The plan would be to call the first weekend's games "Sectionals" and retain "Subregionals" for the eight sites the second weekend. Then go on to the four-team "Regionals" as will be played Thursday and Saturday this week and then "Finals" for the big shootout, which this year will be in Philadelphia March 27 and 29 (Saturday and Monday).

There is a very good reason for calling the first week's games "Sectionals." That's because the four teams at each site should come from the same geographical areas — new districts which would have to be planned by the NCAA Basketball Committee.

This would put an end to the folly started two years ago when, for example, Syracuse played a first-round game in the Midwest Regional at Denton, Tex., and Dayton played at Pocatello, Ida.

Last year, Kansas State played at Philadelphia one week and had to go back to Providence the next week. Michigan played at Pullman, Wash., and then returned to Portland, Ore., a few days later. New Mexico State went to Charlotte, N.C., while Maryland played at Lubbock, Tex. That's economy? How ridiculous can you get?

Well, here's how: Last Saturday it was Michigan and Syracuse at Denton, Tex., Memphis State at Tempe, Ariz., Georgetown (D.C) at Tempe, Ariz., St. John's of New York at South Bend, Ind., Washington at Lawrence, Kan., and DePaul of Chicago at Charlotte, N.C.

For Thursday night's games, DePaul is headed back to North Carolina (Greensboro). Had Syracuse won, the Orangemen would be on their way to Louisville, Ky., and had Georgetown and Memphis State advanced, their next games would be in Los Angeles.

All for a chance to beat defending champion UCLA on its home court at Pauley Pavillion.

Doocy Now 'Wrestling' With Horses

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Grand Island — Tim Doocy didn't know it at the time, but wrestling in high school would greatly aid his future career.

"Wrestling helped me a lot," said the third-leading rider (after the first three weekends) at Fonner Park. "It kept me in shape. You use all parts of your body in wrestling, just like you do in riding."

Doocy finished sixth in the 1974 Iowa State High School Wrestling Tournament (Class AA) as a senior in the 98-pound division.

But after graduating from Glenwood High School after the third quarter in 1974, he started galloping horses as a "test run" before deciding if he wanted to become a full-fledged rider.

"It was just something I wanted to do when I got out of high school. I started galloping horses in South Dakota. I went to McLaughlin for Melvin Schanzenbach. I met him through an uncle and a friend of his that used to box.

"I had ridden saddle horses before, but never race horses," he continued. "I got pretty lucky and did pretty good. Each time I rode a horse I learned something new. You never stop learning."

Now it was time to become a real jockey. Doocy started in the summer of 1974 and accompanied Schanzenbach to the Pennsylvania circuit.

The Iowan rode his first winner at Commodore Downs and then went to Atokad Park near South Sioux City in the Fall.

He was second-leading rider at Atokad when he left with just a few days remaining in the meet. He slipped to third — a creditable effort for a rider with less than seven months experience.

He began the 1975 season by riding at Florida Downs, then went to Assiniboia Downs near Winnipeg, Man., before returning to Atokad Park.

Despite being a jockey for slightly more than one year, Doocy won the rider's title — on the last race of the last day.

"Fred Ecoffey and I were tied and it all came down to the last race. I was on Sugar Harvest and Fred was on another horse (Rare 'N Rich) in the ninth race. I started pulling away and won (Ecoffey's mount was third). At the time, I didn't think about it, but it was a big thrill for me. I got a trophy and I think about $70 in prize money."

In fact, Doocy enjoyed one of his best days ever on the final day of the Atokad meet. The win aboard Sugar Harvest was one of four he achieved that afternoon. He also tallied on both halves of the daily double — Niv Shois in the first and Ol Ten Percent in the second and on Pretty Bluesette.

The 20-year-old rider said veteran riders R.A. Smith, Ecoffey and Dave King contributed needed advice and assistance in his career.

"The hardest thing for me was being able to rate horses and know when to move them. Maybe starting out later than most riders helped me a little. I really don't think it hurt me to start later.

"I know a few more things now than when I started riding. I just picked them up as I went along. I don't feel it's been a big disadvantage to have started later."

Doocy, who said he likes to keep his weight at 112 to 113 pounds, was undecided where he will ride after Fonner ends on April 24.

He may go to Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha or return to Winnipeg.

That's still a big jump from galloping horses in South Dakota just two years ago.

Houston Gains 11th In Row

Huskers Drop Openers, 1-0, 2-0

Houston — Houston University stretched its winning streak to 11 straight and spoiled Nebraska's season opener with two shutouts 1-0, 2-0, Tuesday afternoon at the Houston University ball park.

In the opener Charles Garza gained his fifth win against no losses and his second straight shutout, pitching a one-hitter while in the nightcap Bill Nelson came to the mound in relief in the fourth inning to strand two on base and preserve the win for the Cougars.

Houston gained its only run of the first game when Julio Acosta singled in Mark Wisnoski in the fourth inning. Garza then retired the next ten Huskers for the win.

Denny Buhrer, who gave up only four hits, took the loss going the distance for the Huskers.

In the second game Rick Schroeder singled with men on first and second to bring across the winning run in the fourth inning. Then in the fifth Thad Altman opened with a triple and scored on a sacrifice fly by Ralph Wheeler to help boost Houston's record to 17-5.

The Huskers collected three hits including one each by Healey, Dick Anderson and Ron Miltenberger. Nelson picked up the win to boost his record to 4-1, while Kirk Eymann, now 0-1 took the loss giving up four hits in five innings. Boyd Battenhorst came in to relieve Eymann in the sixth inning and gave up no hits and struck out one.

The two teams will face off again in another twinbill Wednesday.

Wooden: Indiana Not Yet Great

By The Associated Press

John Wooden is a skeptic when he hears about schools challenging UCLA for college basketball's supremacy.

There is, for example, unbeaten and top-ranked Indiana, which wiped out St. John's 90-70 in the first round of the NCAA Mideast Regional basketball tournament last Saturday.

Wooden, who coached UCLA'S Bruins to 10 championships in 12 years before retiring after last year's tournament, watched the game in his new role as a television commentator. Afterwards, he was asked what he thought of the Hoosiers.

"There is no doubt Indiana is a great team," he said. "They have it inside and they have it outside. They have balance and an outstanding defense, the best in the country. They're strong—extremely physical."

But Wooden also wondered if the 28-0 Hoosiers could match up to his championship UCLA squads.

"Before you compare them to any of the other great teams, they've first got to win a national championship," said Wooden. "We (UCLA) won 10 of 12 championships, seven of them in a row."

Coach Bobby Knight's Hoosiers resume their chase for a first national title Thursday night in Baton Rouge, La., against No. 6 Alabama, the Southeastern Conference champion which whipped North Carolina 79-64 in its tournament opener.

The game offers some interesting matchups, especially at center, where Alabama's 6-foot10 Leon Douglas will bang heads with Indiana's All-American, Kent Benson.

"I'm looking forward to Indiana," says Douglas. "I think our team is good enough to go all the way."

Still alive is second-ranked Marquette, 26-1, which faces No. 10 Western Michigan, 26-2, in the other Mideast semifinal. Awaiting the winner of that clash will be Indiana-Alabama survivor, with a spot in the final four at stake.

Fourth-ranked Rutgers, 29-0, a one-point winner over Princeton in its tournament opener, is favored against 18-9 Conneecticut in the East Regional at Greensboro, N.C. VMI, 21-9, takes on DePaul, 20-8, in the other East Regional semifinal.

Kentucky Rallies To Nip K-State, 81-78, In NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Campbell and Bill Eason each hit four big foul shots in the last three minutes to trigger Providence to a 73-67 college basketball victory over Louisville Tuesday night and advance the Friars into the semifinals of the 39th National Invitation Tournament.

The Friars earned a shot in the semifinals against Kentucky, which earlier beat Kansas State 81-78 behind Mike Phillips' second-half scoring.

North Carolina-Charlotte and North Carolina State, who won games Monday night, will meet in Thursday night's other semifinal at Madison Square Garden.

In the first game, Phillips came off the bench to inspire a second-half rally and James Lee hit two crucial foul shots at the end to lead Kentucky past Kansas State.

Phillips, Kentucky's 6-foot-10 muscleman, was forced to leave the game when he sprained an ankle with about five minutes remaining in the first half.

Phillips sat out seven minutes of the second half while Kansas State shot into a 63-51 lead behind sharpshooting Mike Evans.

Kentucky's brawny center was inserted into the game at this point and wasted little time getting the Wildcats offense untracked. He barged in for a layup with 12:30 remaining in the game, then scored 11 more points as Kentucky moved into a 76-70 lead with 5:10 to play.

Lee's two free throws with 1:18 remaining provided the winners with an 80-74 lead and their eventual winning points.

Before Phillips took control, Kansas State had outscored Kentucky 17-4 at the start of the second half.

Chuckie Williams scored 27 points for Kansas State, 20-8, while Larry Dassie had 18 and Evans 17.

Missouri Frightens Texas Tech

Lubbock, Tex. (UPI) — The quality of opposition will take a giant leap forward Thursday night for Texas Tech, and Red Raiders coach Gerald Myers knows the quality of his team's play must take a similar jump.

"Without question, Missouri is going to be a lot stronger and better balanced than Syracuse was," Myers said, "and that means we are going to have to play much better than we did last week in order to stay in the game.

"Missouri has a more experienced team — and when you get this far along it will certainly make a difference."

Tech, despite a bland evening, easily overpowered Syracuse in the opening round of the NCAA tournament last Saturday night to move into the Midwest regional semifinals at Louisville, Ky., Thursday evening against the Big Eight Conference champion Tigers.

A win in that one for Tech would put a Southwest Conference team in the regional finals for the first time since 1968, when Texas Christian met Houston.

The Tech-Missouri meeting will commence at 6:05 CST, followed by the semifinal contest between Notre Dame and Michigan.

"Missouri is well balanced on both offense and defense, and is capable of scoring at any position on the court," Myers said. "They are led by guard Willie Smith, who does a lot of things to get in the open and get good shots.

"Missouri can run and shoot, or it can play a slowed-down, deliberate game — and the Tigers are good at either. We have a lot of respect for them, especially after their victory over Washington."

Washington was one of two nonconference teams to defeat Texas Tech this season.

Although Texas Tech had little trouble with the Orangemen last Saturday, the Raiders did have some difficulty with Syracuse's full-court press.

"We work on it every day, and usually can handle it," Myers said. "But against Syracuse we just didn't execute — we had a lot of mental errors. However, we were able to fall back and play good defense in most cases so Syracuse wasn't able to capitalize on it too much."

Myers was of the opinion Tech would handle the press better against Missouri than it did against Syracuse.

Tax Time Has Its Lighter Side

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

When it comes time to calculate income tax deductions, most Lincolnites aren't a bit shy. They want to take them off, ALL off.

Executives want to deduct their tailored suits as business expenses; women try to write off their cosmetics and most everyone, it seems, wants to claim his pet as a dependent.

Fortunately the people who prepare and check over tax returns have a sense of humor.

Ken Guest, manager of the Lincoln office of the Internal Revenue Service, hasn't heard everything yet but he just might before April 15 rolls around.

> "A dime is a dollar with the taxes removed."

Recently a woman came into the IRS office with a list of medical deductions almost as long as the instructions for the "simple" form.

The problem was she didn't have receipts to prove her doctor bills were legitimate.

"She wanted to show us her scars," Guest recalled. "She did have the evidence, I guess, but not the bills."

Another taxpayer insisted on claiming her as-yet-unborn baby as a deduction her 1975 return Evidence or no, Guest nixed that deduction.

Most people today are very polite, the taxman said.

In the past, however, a tax collector's job has been a bit sticky at times.

In 1794, irate taxpayers tarred and feathered an agent sent to collect excise taxes on whisky, snuff, sugar and slaves.

Many people believe the IRS hasn't forgiven us yet.

Local tax preparers say the average citizen isn't trying to defraud the government.

But when in doubt, they deduct. Sometimes it works, other times well . . .

Mike Busque, an agent for ABC Income Tax Service, recalled questioning a man about contributions to local charities The man said he had given $100 worth of used clothing and furniture to the Goodwill and Salvation Army

Did he have a receipt?

"No," the client said, "but I think it was about $100."

"Are you sure?" Busque queried.

"Yes."

"If the IRS audits this return," Busque warned, "you would have to produce some evidence . . .

"I didn't even get the last words out before the guy changed his mind and said, 'I guess it was only $10.' "

Bob Bryant of Benson-Bryant accountants said people often get a notion they can deduct certain things and try to do it year after year.

One year a client deducted a reasonable amount for two lawnmowers he gave Goodwill, Bryant recalled The next year the same man said he had again given two lawnmowers away

"I guess he got away with it once and decided it was worth a second try."

Casualty losses seem to see a lot of action this time of year.

A local tax consultant said he once filed a return for a woman who raised worms. One year all her breeder worms died and she wrote them off as a casulaty loss. It was legitimate.

A homeowner in the Piedmont area lost several beautiful pine trees on her property due to fire. She claimed a casualty loss of $700 apiece.

Glayne Doolittle's favorite story is about the farmer who claimed a loss because his cow died.

"Most cows will die if you cut them up and put them in the freezer," Doolittle said.

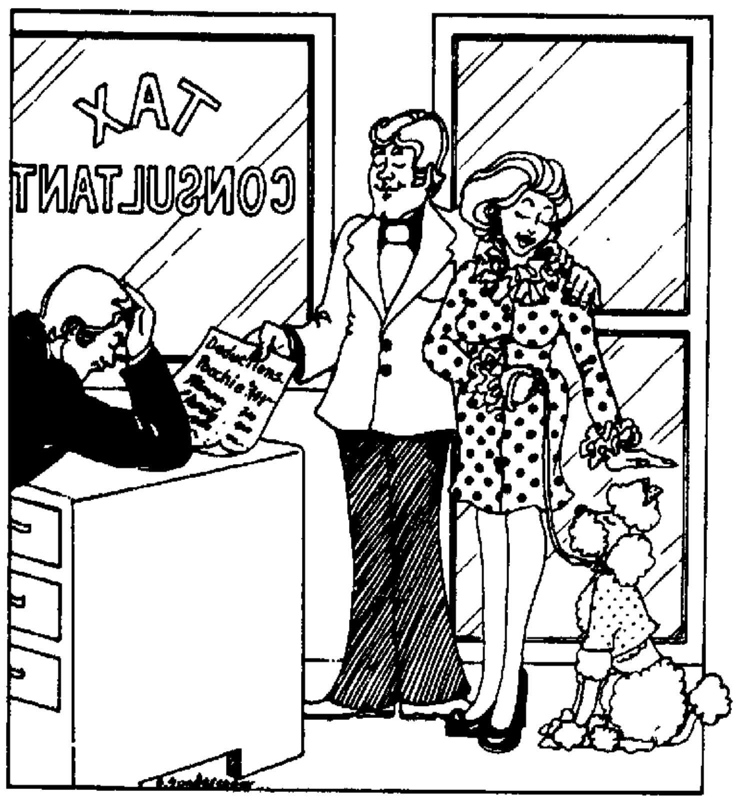
Ron Witt, a part-time agent for Associates Financial Services, said most taxpayers know the IRS will spot any attempt to pad expenses. Instead they "forget" to add in all outside income

> "A taxpayer is a person who doesn't have to take a Civil Service exam to work for the federal government."

Witt said he has yet to file a return for a gambler who reports any earnings from the horse races.

"The races are in town an awfully long time," he added. "I've wondered about that."

Busque said many people don't realize they have to claim prizes, such as television sets or cars won in drawings. But as they say in the tax business, "The Lord giveth and the IRS taketh away."



Bryant said a few of his clients try to deduct tuition they pay to send their children to college.

"Some of them get really mad when I won't put it down," he said. "Maybe they've already put three kids through college that way and the IRS never caught it."

Probably the most taxing situation for a consultant is to file a return for a "divorcing" couple.

Nebraska's six-month waiting period often means people are legally still married and "madder than hops at each other" when it comes time to file their return. Doolittle said.

He said he tries to play marriage counselor long enough to get both parties to sign a joint statement. If they refuse and file separately, they may pay an average of $300 to $400 more.

Bryant said one divorcing couple came to him because "they didn't want to have one more argument" over money

Witt said it's common for divorcees filing separately for the first time to both claim their children as dependents.

Rather than cross the battlelines, Witt "lets the IRS decide who gets the kids "

If they're not split up before, couples might be considering it during or after their session with the taxman

"Probably the thing we find most with people is instant hostility between husbands and wives," said Mary Burr of Burr's Income Tax Service

> "The taxpayer will be the first natural resource to be exhausted."

"One will say, 'I thought you kept track of this, and the other will say, 'No, I thought you were handling it ' "

Sound familiar?

One of the best tell-tale stories in a tax preparer's notebook comes from Bryant

Bryant confessed that "at least a half dozen people every year try to pay me in cash so I won't have to claim the fees on my own income tax "

Stolz Resigns MSU Post

Denny Stolz
Leaves Spartans

Michigan State head football coach Denny Stolz has resigned his post in light of new evidence of football irregularities at the school, MSU President Clifton Wharton announced Tuesday.

Stolz, head coach for three years, was asked to resign last weekend after Wharton met with the school's board of trustees Friday night. Wharton said the decision to ask Stolz to resign was a result of new findings of an internal investigating committee at MSU set up 11 months ago to probe football irregularities. The remaining two years on Stolz' $29,000 contract would be honored.

Former athletic director Burt Smith also has been asked to resign from his current position as special projects director because of the new findings which were not released. MSU was placed on three-years probation in January after the NCAA found the school guilty of 34 rule violations.

Indiana Finishes First In AP Poll

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — It takes more than the ability to throw a spherical object through a cylindrical one to be the nation's top-ranked basketball team, says Indiana Coach Bobby Knight.

"Our players, ranked No. 1 from the start of the season, have been the object of every team's peak effort," said Knight, "and it has taken a team of exceptional character, resolve and competitive nature to meet one challenge after another."

The undefeated Hoosiers, heading into Thursday's semi-final round of the NCAA Mideast Regional tourney, were named to their accustomed top spot Tuesday in the season's final Associated Press college poll.

Knight, named last week as AP's Coach of the Year, took great satisfaction in seeing the Hoosiers finish in the No. 1 ranking for the first time since their NCAA championship team of 1953.

"It is always pleasing to see dedication and effort rewarded," he said. "Those certainly are two of the most important factors involved in the Indiana basketball team and its selection by The AP as No. 1 in the nation."

Indiana, led by All-Americans Scott May and Kent Benson, rolled to its second straight undefeated regular season and its fourth consecutive Big Ten championship.

The Hoosiers also have won a conference-record 37 straight games, 57 regular-season games in a row and 62 of their last 63 games over-all.

"This is a remarkable group of young men, one which I've enjoyed watching play as much as any fan," Knight said. "They react to pressure as well as any team I've ever seen.

"It is every bit as much a group of outstanding young men as it is a very fine basketball team, and I've never enjoyed coaching a squad more than this one," he added.

The Hoosiers received 47 of 52 first-place votes for 1,008 points in the final balloting by The AP's nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Marquette, which finished second to Indiana at 888 points, and Rutgers, down one spot from last week to fourth with 720 points, got two first-place votes apiece. Nevada-Las Vegas, which vaulted over Rutgers into third, received the remaining first-place ballot and 732 points.

Defending NCAA champion UCLA advanced to fifth, Alabama jumped two spots to sixth and Notre Dame held on to its No. 7 spot. Rounding out the Top Ten were North Carolina, down one from last week; Michigan, up from 14th a week ago, and Western Michigan, 16th last week.

The Second Ten was headed by Maryland, followed, in order, by Cincinnati, Tennessee, Missouri, Arizona, Texas Tech, DePaul, Virginia, Centenary and Pepperdine.

DePaul and Pepperdine were newcomers to the Top Twenty, replacing Washington and St. John's, N.Y., which was clobbered 90-70 by Indiana in the first round of the NCAA tourney last week.

Creighton To Join Missouri Conference

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Creighton University, an athletic independent since 1948, was expected to announce Wednesday that it will return to the Missouri Valley Conference.

Tom Apke, athletic director-coach, said Tuesday "an important announcement bearing on the future of Creighton athletics" would be made at a luncheon.

The Creighton Athletic Board met Tuesday.

The Missouri Valley grew to eight teams last week when Indiana State was made a member.

At that time, Apke and Mickey Holmes of Tulsa, Missouri Valley Commissioner, both said they had talked but that no developments were solid.

They said at that time the league had issued no invitation and Creighton had not appliied for admission.

The Omaha school dropped out of the conference in 1948 because it did not restore football to its program. Football was discontinued at Creighton in 1942, during World War II.

The football requisite for membership was eliminated from Missouri Valley by-laws last week. Holmes had said previously that the league wanted to strengthen its basketball program.

Bradley, a longtime Missouri Valley member, also has no football program. At Tulsa, Holmes said Bradley played football when it became a member and was allowed to continue in the conference when it discontinued the grid game.

Advantages for Creighton to rejoin the Valley would include "automatic" scheduling of probably 16 basketball games and a post season tournament, which the league reportedly plans to inaugurate next year to name its NCAA tournament representative.

Hash Leaves Waverly Job

Waverly — Randy Hash, who guided Waverly to a Class B runnerup finish last fall in football, has resigned his teaching and coaching positions to enter private business.

Hash's Waverly teams were 17-2-2 the last two seasons. His four-year record there is 24-13-2. He coached two years at Ainsworth, compiling an 11-8-1 record before moving to Waverly.

Hash, 32, will remain in Nebraska as a stock broker. He spent one year at Halsey-Dunning, one at Newman Grove and one as a graduate assistant at Pittsburg (Kan.) State College before moving to Ainsworth.

Tourney Slated For Ceresco

Ceresco — The second annual Ceresco Invitational Basketball Tournament will be played at Ceresco Gymnasium Thursday, Friday and Sunday.

Defending champion Ceresco will be joined by 1975 runnerup Malcolm, Prague, Wahoo and two Lincoln teams. The Celestials and Howell's Body Shop will represent Lincoln in the men's recreational tournament.

An admission charge of 75 cents will be used to fund the Ceresco softball team.

Games will be played at 6:30 and 8:15 on Thursday and Friday, and the title match will begin at 8 p.m. Sunday, preceded by a pair of consolation contests starting at 4 p.m.

NFL Draft Dates Slated By League

CORONADO, Calif. (UPI) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Tuesday the National Football League will accept no more expansion clubs in the foreseeable future and that the 1978 Super Bowl would be held at the Lousiana Superdome.

The 28 NFL club owners during a seven-hour meeting decided that a veteran allocation draft will be held March 30-31 to stock the league's two new franchises, the Seattle Seahawks and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Rozelle said the annual collegiate draft would be held eight days later on April 8-9. Both drafts would be held in the New York offices of the NFL.

The commissioner said the league turned down franchise bids from Memphis and Birmingham, former World Football League cities.

"After a lengthy and thorough discussion," Rozelle said, "the clubs concluded that under the present conditions—that is our legal and labor problems—they could not firmly commit to expansion at this time.

"However, it is clear these two cities were the most active in recent months and will be among those strongly considered when the league eventually feels it can expand."

Among the problems the league must overcome before expansion, Rozelle said, were court rulings that went against the NFL and the issue of collective bargaining.

Rozelle said a list of eligible players would be available to Seattle and Tampa Bay the day before the allocation draft.

Nastase Ban Lifted

DALLAS (AP) — The International Professional Tennis Council lifted its suspension Tuesday on controversial Romanian star Ilie Nastase, according to Bob Briner, executive director of the Association of Tennis Professionals.

The move clears the way for Nastase to play in the Independent Players Association tour this week at La Costa, Calif. The ban went into effect when Nastase had failed to pay the fine.

Briner said Nastase, who was slapped with a $6,000 fine last week for his behavior in a tournament at Toronto, is contributing the $6,000 to the Canadian Tennis Association.

"We are pleased that this matter has been concluded and we can concentrate future energies on the development of tennis," Briner said.

In Toronto, Lawrie Strong, president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, said the fine perhaps was en route, but until the money was received by the organization, the suspension would remain in effect.

NFL Players File Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventy-nine present and former National Football League Players filed a class-action suit in U.S. District Court Tuesday for damages they say they sustained as a result of the Rozelle Rule, the players union announced.

Named as defendants in the suit, filed in Minneapolis, were the present 26 NFL teams, the league itself and Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The suit, filed on behalf of all NFL players who have been under contract to and been on the active roster of a NFL team at any time since the beginning of the 1972 season, seeks an unspecified amount of damages.

A second count in the complaint was brought by Jim McFarland, Ron Jessie, Bob Grim, Frank Gallagher and Gary Larsen on behalf of themselves and the class of all NFL players who have played out the option since 1972 and become free agents.

The suit, according to union president Dick Anderson, is a follow-up to the recent John Mackey decision in which the Rozelle Rule regarding compensation was declared illegal. The ruling is being appealed by the NFL.

Soviets Claim Sports Power

MOSCOW (AP) — A top Soviet sports official claimed Tuesday that the balance of sports power is shifting steadily to socialist countries, and denied claims by "western journalists" that the Soviet Union drills its athletes in special military-like units.

"Bourgeois propaganda mouthpieces do not tire of wishful thinking of all sorts, and concocting rumors and lies in order to belittle the significance of the sports victories scored by the USSR and the other socialist countries," said Sergei Pavlov, chief of the Soviet government's Committee on Physical Culture and Sports.

In an interview in Literaturnaya Gazeta, as reported by the Tass News Agency, Pavlov said socialist countries would continue to gain in sports performance because of "the fact that sports activities are within reach of the masses."

While denying that paramilitary training for athletes exists in the Soviet Union, Pavlov acknowledged that "the state spares no efforts and resources . . . for promoting physical culture and sports among the masses."

According to recent Soviet publications, more than 200,000 "physical culture collectives" exist at factories, offices and farms. The collectives, which have about 45 million members, are subsidized mainly by the state budget, trade union funds, receipts from sports events and the profits of the institutions where the collectives operate.

Soviet athletes get free facilities and usually receive time off from their jobs with pay to participate in competitions, according to the Soviet publications.

Nebraska Wins Bowling Meet

Lawrence, Kan. — The Nebraska Men's Bowling team captured the Big Eight championship this past weekend with a 15-3 record for the nine set tournament.

Ray Koziol of Nebraska finished the top men's bowler with a total pin fall of 3566 for a 198, 18 game average, and was named along with Pat Masters to the all-star team.

The women's team finished fourth behind Debbie Bertrand, who had fourth highest games of 228 and 408 set.

The NU men's team had trailed by 10 pins after the 15th game of the 18 game series, but Larry Meierdierks with games of 205, 193 and 398 and Koziol's 183 and 213 totalling 396 the Huskers rolled to a 1896 ninth set to win the match, nipping Kansas State.

Cage Coaches Face Axes

From News Wires

It's the end of the basketball season and time for firing coaches and replacing them with hopes for the future.

One such firing, Sox Walseth of Colorado, brought numerous inquiries within hours of his removal. One caller Nebraska basketball coach Joe Cipriano recommended consideration of his two assistants, Lonnie Porter, former head coach of Denver Manual High School, and Moe Iba, former Memphis State head coach.

Michigan State coach Gus Ganakas will be removed from his coaching job and reassigned to other duties, the university announced. Ganakas had been basketball coach since 1969, and the Spartans were 14-13 overall and 10-8 in the Big Ten.

Michigan State President Clifton Wharton also said he would recommend to the school's board of trustees Friday that the expiring contracts of two assistant basketball coaches be extended for only 90 days.

The coaches, Vern Payne and Dick Versace, thus could be more easily fired or reassigned after a new head coach is chosen.

Ganakas last year was the center of controvesy when all the team's black varsity players staged a one-game boycott after Ganakas assigned a white freshman player to start. Later, in May, the team's three white basketball players decided not to return to Michigan State this year.

Other coaching changes included Virginia Tech's Don DeVoe being replaced after five years and one NIT title by Tulane's Charlie Moir. DeVoe is seeking the Ohio State head coaching post, which was vacated with the resignation of Fred Taylor.

Abe Lemons, head coach of Pan American, has been named head coach of the Texas Longhorns after Memphis State coach Wayne Yates turned down the job. Lemons agreed to a five-year $150,000-plus contract with Texas.

Bill Cofield, an assistant at Virginia, was named as the head coach at Wisconsin, becoming the first black man hired as a head basketball coach in the Big Ten Conference.

Wyoming Athletic Director George McCarty said he will recommend that the contract of basketball coach Moe Radovich not be renewed for the coming season.

Bill's Comet Earns Fonner Feature Win

Grand Island — Mrs. W. F. Frazee's Bill's Comet scored his first 1976 victory by winning the featured seventh race Tuesday here at Fonner Park.

The 7-year-old gelding laid just off the pace and then responded under urging by jockey Dave Pettinger to score a 3½-length verdict over Tom Chaffee's Steven Would in the 6½-furlong allowance scamper.

Bill's Comet defeated five foes for the $3,000 purse.

He returned $7.80, $4.60 and $2.80. Steven Would, ridden by Tim Doocy, placed for $6.80 and $3.20 while Jerry Chaffee's Mystery Ruler, steered by Ken Jones, showed for $2.80.

Trainer Dale Burns moved into a tie for the Fonner trainer lead when he saddled Al and Eileen Cascio's Twilight Squall ($6.00) to victory in the eighth. Burns and defending leading trainer, Don Von Hemei, each have seven victories.

Three riders each tallied two triumphs. Rob Williams scored with Cheri Beri ($6.60) in the first and Mr. Mayor ($7.60) in the fourth, Pettinger won with Bill's Comet and Twilight Squall and Walter Orona tallied with Bill's Blessing ($8.00) in the sixth and See My Heels ($4.80) in the ninth.

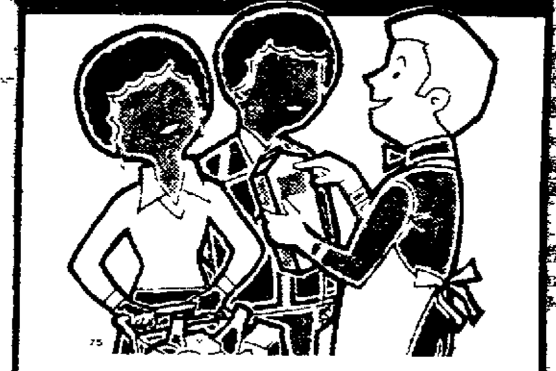
KNOW YOUR FOOD



MILK GROUP

Many of today's diets are low in calcium because we don't use enough calcium rich foods, such as milk and cheese in our diets. Growing children need calcium to build bones and teeth especially during teen years, when children are growing fast.

Adults too need calcium even though they're not building bones and teeth. Each day adults lose some calcium and must replace it. Calcium helps clot blood when you cut or injure yourself, it helps keep all your muscles in good shape so they can work for you especially the heart muscles.

Milk is our leading source of calcium. It also provides high quality protein, riboflavin, vitamin A (if milk is whole or fortified) and other nutrients. Protein in milk builds and repairs body tissues, helps the body fight infection and supplies energy. Eight ounces of fresh whole milk has about 160 calories; the same amount of skim milk has only 90 calories.

Foods Included in the Milk Group: Milk: fluid whole, evaporated, skim, dry, buttermilk. Cheese: cottage, cream, cheddar type, natural or processed. Ice cream. Yogurt.

Recommended Amounts: Some milk daily is urged for almost everyone. Recommended amounts in terms of 8 ounce cups (or glasses) of whole fluid milk are: children under 9: 2-3 cups, children 9-12: 3 or more cups, teenagers: 4 or more cups, adults: 2 or more cups, pregnant women: 3 or more, nursing mothers: 4 or more. Part of all the milk may be fluid skim milk, buttermilk, evaporated milk or dry milk.

Cheese, ice cream and yogurt can be used in place of part of the milk. The amount of any of these it will take to replace a given amount of milk is figured on the basis of calcium content. On this basis, examples are: 1 inch cube cheddar type cheese equals ½ cup milk; ½ cup cottage cheese equals ⅓ cup milk; 2 tablespoons cream cheese equals 1 tablespoon milk; ½ cup ice cream equals ⅓ cup milk; 1 cup plain yogurt equals 1 cup milk; 1 cup fruit flavored yogurt equals ¾ cup milk.

Curriculum Coordination Concern Of School Board

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

"The biggest single concern we have," said Lincoln Board of Education President Louis Roper, "is coordination" of curriculum among schools and through the grades.

"We field the questions of many parents" regarding foundation-building and continuity as opposed to three separate blocks of elementary, junior and senior high, Roper said.

In a board work session Tuesday with administrators, Roper fretted aloud about school buildings assuming a "sovereign" role in the district's decentralized management approach.

Supt. John Prasch acknowledged there are "risks inherent" when more decisions are allowed further away from the central administration. It would "be a lot easier," he said, to run a "monolithic" operation with all decisions coming from on high.

Run A Good Program

But Prasch said he believes the district's purpose "is to run the best possible program for kids, not to make the board members comfortable in answering the public." He included administrators — himself, principals and consultants — in sharing the "heat" Roper said board members sometimes feel.

The administrators generally agreed with Prasch that shared decision-making allows more flexibility in offering programs that meet needs of children in each school, "which a monolithic system wouldn't allow."

Prasch agreed with board member Lu Pansing that by law the board is nonetheless accountable for all programs.

Ideally, he said, coordination issues could be resolved if a group of elementary schools would flow into a single junior high, and in turn always transfer into another specific high school. But the attendance zone changes required would cause "chaos," he said.

Time To Listen

Meanwhile, he said, the decentralized management lends itself to broader parent and citizen participation, which also makes a harder job for the professional staff since they must take the time to listen.

Board member Pearl Goldenstein warned against listening "to bridge-table gossip and acting as though it's a mandate from the entire school district." Yet she and board members said they call principals or Prasch about complaints they receive.

Jo Ann Maxey said she's received complaints that children aren't learning basics, that they get to junior high they're "still counting on their fingers and toes."

Some Intimidated

Mrs. Maxey also said some parents are intimidated and afraid to contact school staff members. All those factors combine to put board members on the defensive, she said.

Evaluator Nick Novak told the board that the district's general educational program cannot be violated, and that local building flexibility allows latitude in presentation.

"You've got to remember," said Principal John Jensen of Arnold Elementary, "you just can't do everything for everybody." To the extent that shared decision-making is successful, "you have a good program," responsive to wider needs.

Mickle Junior High Principal Jack Peterson said teachers have "higher motivation" when they have "a stake in what is happening."

But since they are professionals, Peterson said, their effectiveness can't be measured assembly-line fashion. Teachers and principals, Jensen said, "have a clear concept of what's expected."

Not Serious Problem

Northeast High Assistant Principal Dick Colerick said although high school staffs "feel there's not good strong coordination," largely they "don't feel it's a serious problem."

Roper and board members overall favor decentralization, but he urged improved cooperation between the three levels of schools.

The group requested any pay boosts be distributed equally across all their pay levels, since a flat dollar figure would produce a smaller improvement for the higher paid category.

And while they cited appreciation for fringe benefits improvements since about 1968, the administrators said those should be expanded further for them. They suggested spelling out via contracts their responsibilities, duties and rights.

On salary schedule placement, they noted most administrators are low or midway up the highest paid category. They requested improving retirement benefits from the $700 monthly, including Social Security.

Later, the Office Personnel Association requested paid holidays based on seniority and a 30-cent increase per pay level. Their salary base is $2.50 hourly.

Miss Good And Friend Are Guilty

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Manson cultist Sandra Good and her friend, Susan Murphy, were convicted by a jury Tuesday of conspiring to send death threats to business and government leaders.

The jury deliberated a little more than 1½ hours before finding the defendants guilty on all counts.

The two defendents sat passively as the verdicts were read by court clerk Walter Fitzpatrick.

Miss Murphy, who was free without bail, asked to be remanded to custody immediately, which the judge ordered. Miss Good, who was not free on bail, asked to be sentenced immediately, but the judge set an April 13 date to pass sentence.

She could receive up to 25 years in prison — five years for each of the five counts.

Miss Murphy, a former nurse, could be sentenced to five years in prison for the one conspiracy count.

Earlier in the day, Miss Good had told the jury that she would have liked to have been part of a plot let by convicted murderer Charles Manson to kill businessmen.

"It would give me great satisfaction to remove from the earth executives of Standard Oil Company" she said.

Audition Winners Offer Treat For Lincoln Symphony Goers

By RICHARD GRACE

It is always a great pleasure to hear the audition winners perform. This evening was no exception when the Lincoln Symphony, under the direction of Robert Anders Emile, featured two young artists; bassonist Mark Kelley and pianist Dianne Moore.

It is an unusual treat to hear bassoon concerto at a symphony concert. The bassoon does not fall into the preconceived idea of a virtuoso concerti instrument. However, Mark Kelley and Vivaldi's Concerto for Bassoon in E minor proved otherwise. Mr. Kelley, principal chair with the Lincoln Symphony and student at the University of Nebraska, aptly demonstrated his superior technique and fine musicianship with much ease and poise. His warm tone quality and clean runs were always apparent throughout the Vivaldi work, which was scored for strings and bassoon solo. Mention must also be directed toward Loretta Love, whose harpsichord playing on the continuo part added just the proper flavor to the Baroque work.

Dianne Moore, a lovely and talented graduate student at the University of Nebraska, was equally at home at the piano keyboard. Performing Concerto No. 2 in D Minor by Edward MacDowell, Mrs. Moore displayed agility, strength, and a high degree of sensitivity to the moving first movement. The MacDowell work in generally acknowledged to be among his best compositions but it is still not widely known to concert-goers. MacDowell, American by birth, was musically trained in Europe and this particular piece has strong European ties, especially those toward the Romantic Concerto so popular at the turn of the century. It was enjoyable to hear these two fine musicians and equally so to two different composers from the usual realm of concerto composers.

Conductor Emile, already noted for his excellent and diverse choice of literature, opened the program with the "New Frontier Overture" by the American composer, Robert Beadell. A professor of composition at the university does not relegate Beadell to the title of a "local" composer. He is widely known throughout the Midwest for his many compositions in so many different fields of writing. This overture, written in 1962, shows fine originality, good melodic invention and sounds wonderfully American in style.

The second half of the program was devoted to an extremely familiar work, Brahms Symphony No. 4 in E minor. One of the most popular works in the orchestral repertoire, this puts the Lincoln Symphony at a decided disadvantage when comparisons might arise with the many fine recordings available. But there is some magic about hearing a work in person and one become engrossed with the creation at hand. The overall view of the performance has to be highly successful despite some spotty moments when the articulation was not as clean or crisp as desired or when Emile was pressing the orchestra for subtle tempi changes. It is a magnificant work, certainly not easy to perform by any stretch of the imagination. But the orchestra again displayed its wealth of talent with this excellent reading.

U.S. Millimetering Toward Change

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — You know politicians — give em an inch and they ll take 1 6 kilometers Last December President Ford signed the Metric Conversion Act which will encourage increased use of the metric system throughout the U S Sooner or later we ll all have to face it — jogging in kilometers dieting in kilograms cooking in milliliters and hoping the heat in August won t go over 30 degrees

The metric system was developed in France in the 1790 s as a more logical and internally consistent way of treating weights and measures than the British inches feet pounds And indeed it is Like our decimal approach to numbers everything in metrics is build on blocks of 10 This makes it easy to manipulate the system mathematically a great advantage to engineering and technology

Metrics spread rapidly throughout the non English speaking world and recently even Britain Canada and Australia gave up the fight Only the U S and a handful of tiny countries resisted it Because of its practical use the metric system was legalized for the U S in 1866 — but not until recently has it started inching (millimetering?) its way into our daily lives

If you have a child in school he probably knows already that a meter is a little more than a yard a kilogram is a little more than two pounds a liter is a little more than a quart As with any thought system it s easier when you start young

Some signs of metric conversion may be virtually invisible to you For example most canned goods now carry the weight in both ounces and grams You can buy measuring cups with ounces on one side and milliliters on the other But soft conversions like this don t make any impact, because you don t have to use them The real test won t come until you have to ask for a liter of this and a kilogram of that, and know in advance how much you ll get

Some products have already made the full conversion to metric — by which I mean that no British system equivalent exists Photographers for example have no question about the size of 35 millimeter film You can drive a 1 6 liter Chevette break your leg on 180-centimeter skis smoke 120 millimeter cigarettes and banish headaches with a 350 milligram aspirin tablet Half liter bottles of Seven Up and Coca-Cola are in test markets

Companies already involved in metric conversion include General Motors United States Steel IBM Squibb, Otis Elevator Caterpillar Tractor, J C Penney, General Foods and Xerox My associate Anne Wolman spoke with some of the companies involved

Cars — Everett L Baugh executive engineer in charge of General Motors metric system says that the costs of conversion have been greatly exaggerated The Chevette is virtually all metric when tooling up they simply used metric measures rather than standard ones From now on all new model GM cars will be metrically tooled You ll probably never notice unless you repair cars yourself in which case you ll have to ask your hardware store for metric wrenches Nowadays around 25% of all wrenches and drill bits sold have metric standards

Retailing — Sears will start adding metric equivalents to some of its menswear lines this year A man s shirt with a 15-inch collar and 35-inch sleeves will also be labeled 35 90 the latter being centimeters Women s clothing will take longer to convert, because sizes are not as standard

Food — Industry committees are examining what the standard sizes of new packages should be, with the object of making the changeover as easy as possible They ll probably still consider a half-cup a ' serving, although it will be half a metric cup (fractionally larger than the present one) Recipes will be measured in metric teaspoons and tablespoons but most cooks won t notice the difference Julia Child s new cookbook From Julia Child s Kitchen includes an 11-page conversion section

Driving — Many states are moving toward metric road signs in some cases starting with state parks

It will be more than 10 years before conversion is official but it s not too early to start thinking about it After all 28 35 grams of prevention are worth 453 6 of cure By the time the system takes over enough metric items should have crept into your life to make the transition easy

Mortgage Loan Rates Plummet To 2-Year Low

The interest rate on a home mortgage is now at the lowest level in two years according to Lincoln loan officers

The interest rate on an 80% mortgage has dipped to 8¾% at most local savings and loan companies

Six months ago the interest rate on an 80% conventional loan hit 9½% in the Lincoln area

The interest rate peak came a few months after a state 11% usury ceiling went into effect A strong winter flow of money into savings accounts has apparently outpaced loan demand

Business Gains Lift Stock Mart

New York (AP) — Reports of a jump in housing starts and other gains in business activity perked up a sluggish stock market Tuesday, pushing prices higher in increased trading

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 8 97 to 983 47, bouncing back from a 28 81-point slide over the two previous sessions

Advances outnumbered declines by about a 5-3 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues

Big Board volume rose to 22 78 million shares from Monday s 2½ month low of 19 57 million

Activity had been quiet and indecisive until midafternoon, when the Commerce Department issued a flurry of economic reports

One showed a 27 per cent jump in housing starts in February from the month before — a figure that was "much better than expected," in the words of Eldon A Grimm at Birr, Wilson & Co

Another listed a 1 1 per cent gain in business sales during January, with an accompaning 5 per cent rise in inventories

At this tage of the business cycle, with the economy trying to work its way out of the recession, a buildup in inventories is takenas a sign of increased confidnece among business managers

Later in the day, the Federal Reserve reported that industrial production registered its 10th straight monthly increase in February

Although the London stock market feel sharply on British Prime Minister Harold Wilson s surprise announcement of plans to resign, the news seemed to have little impact on U S stock prices

Among homebuilding stocks, U S Home and Kaufman & Broad each picked up nearly a point to rank among the day s best percentage gainers

The Big Three automakers' shares all pikced up ground following bright early-March car sales reports on Monday

General Motors rose more than a point and Ford and Chrysler tacked on fractions

Citicorp posted a point-sized gain in active trading The financial holding company raised its dividend

American Finance System jumped from 3⅞ to above the 6 level on word of merger plans with Beneficial Corp, under which beneficial would pay $7 50 apiece for American Finance shares

Beneficial stock was off a fraction

Youngstown Steel Door, off more than a point, was the biggest percentage loser The company projected a first quarter loss and omitted its dividend

American Telephone & Telegraph, the day's most active issue, gained ground on turnover of better than 250,000 shares

Judge Dismisses One Charge In Grain Scheme Swindle Case

Omaha (UPI) — U S District Judge Robert V Denney Tuesday dismissed one of the remaining four charges against a former Oklahoma bank president originally indicted in a $360 000 scheme to defraud outstate Nebraska grain dealers

Donald Marley former president of the Sequoyah State Bank of Muldrow Okla was expected to take the stand in his own defense Wednesday after the government rested its case late Tuesday

I fully expect my client to take the stand said Marley s attorney Thomas C McQuade of Omaha, following Tuesday s session ' Unless something drastic happens between now and Wednesday

Denney granted a motion by McQuade to drop a charge of wire fraud against Marley filed in connection with an alleged $27 763 grain swindle in Cozad

Still remaining are a charge of interstate transportation of fraudulently obtained grain relating to the Cozad transaction and two charges one of wire fraud and another of interstate transportation relating to a $56-000 grain transaction in York

Both interstate transportation charges relate to aiding and abetting the shipments and the government expects Denney to drop the one relating to the Cozad incident The wire fraud count that Denney dismissed was necessary to prove the transportation charge.

The defense has stipulated a fradulent scheme did in fact exist but contends Marley one of 15 Oklahomans indicted on 47 counts by a federal grand jury in Omaha last Aug 8 wasn t involved in it

Marley was dismissed from his job at the bank shortly after the indictment was returned

Other Cases Settled

Through plea bargaining the remaining defendants have either pleaded guilty or no contest to misdemeanor counts or have had the charges against them dismissed

The government s case suffered a setback in January when the key defendant Elvin Woody Sallisaw Okla was allegedly shot to death by Spencer Coffman also of Sallisaw during an incident in Oklahoma During a fight which proceeded the shooting Woody allegedly shot and killed Joe Gibson Coffman s brother-in-law

During testimony Tuesday Cozad banker Clifford Young testified he was given a name with a number on it by several of the defendants in which to verify money in an account at the Sequoyah State Bank

Young testified he called the number and asked for the bank president but couldn t remember the name of the president or the name of the person he talked with

Identification Needed

Young s positive identification was necessary for the government to prove the two Cozad counts

Another banker Marion Bonham of York did, however, identify Marley as the person he spoke to by telephone during a querry similar to Young s

On both occasions however the checks in question were terminated at the Sequoyah State Bank

Mrs Joann Vest an assistant cashier at the bank testified Tuesday that on one day alone Woody terminated seven checks but on other occasions checks were allowed to clear the bank

She said Marley granted permission for Woody to take check termination cards out of the bank where they were allegedly signed by a person named Richard Allen who the government contends never existed

Cash In Bag

Mrs Vest testified Woody opened an account in the name of Redwood Farms of Sallisaw on October of 1974 She said Woody was carrying $100 000 in cash in a paper bag

Mrs Vest said she was instructed by Woody to never give out the balance in the account by telephone even if it was requested by Woody or his wife, Mary who was also indicated The charges against her were dismissed

Woody subsequently closed the Redwood Farms account and established another under the name of G & R Grain

War On Bribes Takes Feminine Twist In Mexico

Mexico City (UPI) — Mexico City authorities believe they have found a way to discourage bribetaking among traffic cops. They assigned women to write out tickets for erring motorists.

"Our girls can't be bought," says Lt. Col. Maria Isabel Espinoza, chief of Group 28, the 600-member feminine contingent of the capital's police force. "We have too much pride."

Exon Receives News Film Clip About Nebraska

A film print of the Charles Kuralt series "On the Road" which featured Nebraska was presented to Gov. J. James Exon in a special luncheon ceremony Tuesday.

The film recently was broadcast on the CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite. A second copy of the 16mm film will be presented later to Marvin Kivett, Nebraska State Historical Society director.

Peter Herford, affiliate liaison director in New York, said CBS News was making each of the 50 state films available for presentation to each governor by the affiliate station located in the capital city.

START THE DAY WITH C

One of the bright spots in the long winter is the availability of fresh grapefruit. They are at the peak of their production in January and February.

Besides having a delightful refreshing taste, grapefruit are an excellent source of vitamin C. One medium size grapefruit supplies the body with its total requirement of ascorbic acid for a day. Vitamin C is utilized by the body in rebuilding tissue and wound healing. It may function in hydrogen ion transfer systems and aid in regulation of intercellular oxidation-reduction of potentials.

Vitamin C is not synthesized by the human body and is stored in only small amounts. Because of this characteristic, foods containing vitamin C should be eaten each day.

At the present time there is inadequate scientific evidence to justify massive doses of vitamin C. In studies where doses of 100 to 10,000 mg of vitamin C were given daily no beneficial results were observed in prevention of upper respiratory infections. Some evidence has been demonstrated that excessive doses of vitamin C over an extended period of time might be harmful.

Fresh grapefruit sections with fruit dressing is a most enjoyable method of achieving an adequate vitamin C intake.

Women Rangers Handle Job Despite Teasing

©The New York Times

Mesa Verde National Park, Colo. — They get teased about their funny hats, the tilt of the badge on their chests and the cut of their trousers. Male chauvinists call them "rangerettes" and "nature fakers." Tourists can't believe they really know the Yellowstone back country better than their male counterparts. There are only 79 of them in the country.

Nevertheless, women rangers, still a rare species in the national parks, are becoming more and more a part of the federal government's field force. The 79 women who are part of the permanent staff of 1,432 "rangers" (a term that includes interpreters, protective rangers, park superintendents and field directors) employed by the National Park Service are forging into what once was nearly a total male preserve.

"We've still got a long way to go," said Sharma Bierhaus, who, at 42, is superintendent of Timpanogos Cave National Monument in Utah. "But until five years ago there were almost no women at all in management positions.

"There are other superintendents who think I'm a token," went on Miss Bierhaus, who was appointed to her job in November 1974. "I don't know what it's going to take to prove them wrong, except you can't quarrel with doing a good job."

Gains Considerable

Here in Mesa Verde, that splendid collection of early Indian cliff dwellings wedged between sandstone rocks in the southwest corner of Colorado, women are making striking gains. The permanent staff of three interpretive rangers includes one woman, Linda Martin, 30, whose job is to explain to troops of tourists how the strange tenement-like communities of Mesa Verde came into being seven centuries ago.

On the staff of protective rangers — the ones who carry guns and are responsible for safety in the parks — is another woman — Mary Jane McDowell. Last summer, the seasonal staff of 35 interpretive rangers included 17 women.

Linda Martin, who made up her mind to be a ranger as a child when her family took her on trips through various parks, started out as a seasonal ranger in Yellowstone National Park. Her brother-in-law, a protective ranger, used to kid her by saying, "Some day you'll become a real ranger."

Creighton Graduate

A graduate of Creighton University in Omaha with a degree in history, Miss Martin spent part of 1973 in ranger training school at Grand Canyon, where she learned how to give walking tours, first aid and field trips, as well as mountaineering and compass training. She spent two years at Montezuma's Castle National Monument in central Arizona before coming to Mesa Verde.

The most frequent comment about her sex, she said as she accompanied about 40 hardy winter visitors down a winding path to see the "Spruce Tree House" dwelling, was, "I've never seen a lady ranger before."

Most people, she said, "just assume all rangers are men."

Miss Martin pointed out that if a male and female ranger stand side by side, most tourists still direct their questions to the man. This became an embarrassment in Yellowstone, she recalled, because she alone among the interpreters at Old Faithful could give directions about the area's back country, so the men were forced to turn questioners over to her.

Even though the Park Service is trying to hire more women, a hiring freeze on permanent employes and the priority given to Vietnam veterans is slowing down that progress. Ann Rasor, a 24-year-old graduate of Colorado State University, currently works at Mesa Verde, hoping this and her three summers as a seasonal ranger will get her a permanent job.

'Live In Natural Place'

Miss Rasor, who majored in environmental interpretation in college, said she sought to be a ranger because "I want to influence people on the environment, and because I want to live in a natural place rather than a city."

Both Miss Rasor and Miss Martin learned early that tourists routinely make wrong assumptions about women rangers.

"What gets me is people who assume you're in the Park Service because you are married to a ranger," Miss Rasor said. Actually, there are very few married women rangers.

Progress Less

Some women in the federal government think that while the attitude of the National Park Service (a branch of the Interior Department) is improving, they say they are not doing as well in a related area, the Forest Service. That's a branch of the Department of Agriculture that controls huge areas of federal wilderness, forests and grasslands.

Last summer, the Park Service hired 14 women and 41 men to be season rangers, augmenting the permanent staff of 79 women and 1,363 men. By comparison, the Forest Service has 5,004 professional foresters, of whom only 28 are women. Many of those women have administrative jobs. The Forest Service has a total of 6,450 technicians and aides who do field work such as pruning and watching for fires, but only 193 of those are women.

Signed one female bureaucrat, "we've still got to deal with the resistance that comes from the idea of the 'strong man in uniform.' "

Bad Dalzuflen, West Germany (UPI) — This north German health resort offers special courses to people who find satisfaction in painting portraits or landscapes in their spare time.

Another Man Charged With Shooting In Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Charges were dropped against one man and filed against another Tuesday in connection with the shooting of an Omaha pharmacist.

Douglas Deputy County Atty. Frank Pane said charges were dropped against Gary L. Johnson in connection with the shooting of pharmacist Frank Bogard.

Pane said charges of shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim, using a firearm in commission of a felony and robbery were filed against Bruce W. Bibins of Bellevue.

Bibins was arrested at his home Monday afternoon just hours after a $10,000 cash bond was set for Johnson in Municipal Court.

Bogard, 51, was shot in the neck at point-blank range during the robbery of his near northwide pharmacy Friday night.

Authorities said he will be paralyzed from the chest down as the result of the bullet which damaged his spinal column. He was in serious condition at Lutheran Hospital Tuesday.

Lt. John Maley, head of the police robbery unit, said Johnson was arrested after a witness to the shooting identified his mug shot as one of the men involved in the robbery and later picked him out of a line-up.

Police said Tuesday they now have evidence that Johnson was not involved in the robbery and shooting. Police are seeking a second man involved in the incident.

Pane said charges are also pending against Bibins in two other robberies.

NU Players Nip Coaches In Tilt

By VIRGIL PARKER

Despite the addition of three 'ringers' in the lineup and some officiating help in the closing moments, the Nebraska football coaches were unable to overcome a big halftime deficit and dropped a close 55-54 basketball decision to the NU football seniors at Lincoln High's Johnson Gym Tuesday night.

The coaches had huge John Dutton, the all-pro defensive end of the Balimore Colts; rugged Monte Johnson, the Oakland Raiders middle linebacker; and slick Jerry Tagge, the ex-Green Bay Packer quarterback who is headed for the Chicago Bears, in their lineup.

Tagge pumped in 13 points to pace a second-half comeback attempt. Dutton was a demon around the backboards, but the ex-South Dakota allstater was 0-7 from the free throw line (who would dare foul him?) to hurt the coaches cause.

But the players, behind some long-range accuracy by John O'Leary, Jimmy Burrow and a couple of fast-break buckets by Tom Heiser, regained the lead.

Dean Gissler sank a free throw with 14 seconds left to give the players a three-point edge and preserve the victory.

Husker head coach Tom Osborne, who also had eight points, was the only coach to find the range in the early going.

A preliminary game, pitting the coaches from Lincoln High, Southeast and Pius X against the coaches from Northeast and East Highs, was equally close.

Assistant Pius coach Tim Anderson hit a baseline shot at the final gun to give his side a 40-38 victory.

Players' Veto Imperils Start Of New Season

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — A ringing rejection by the major league players to the club owners' "final and best proposal" plunged the start of the 1976 baseball season into extreme peril Tuesday and cast grave doubt that any quick accord could be reached in the game's prolonged labor hassle.

For the first time, American League President Lee MacPhail admitted he was concerned about the baseball season opening on time, April 8.

Asked whether there was a chance the season now would not start on schedule, he said, "it's getting very close. Every hour this thing drags on places the start of the season in greater jeopardy."

The latest distressing setback in the negotiations came when the players refused to okay an owners' plan which would have technically given all 600 major leaguers the right to play out their options and become free agents with the expiration of their current contracts.

Key stumbling block was the so-called "liability issue" in which the owners would put an eight-team negotiating limit on the players playing out their options instead of all 24 as is now the case in the court-upheld Andy Messersmith decision.

MacPhail and the owners' chief negotiator, John Gaherin, both of whom departed for New York after one final brief pow-wow with the players, agreed the outlook was bleak.

"You can't be optimistic in the face of the attitude being displayed here by the players," said Gaherin. Added MacPhail: "We don't know what the next move is."

There was some speculation that baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn might yet step into the dispute and defy the owners by opening the locked spring training camps. But a spokesman for the commissioner said Kuhn would not make any statement until the Players' Executive Committee officially rejects the owners' proposal in Tampa Wednesday.

Still, the players and their union chief, Marvin Miller, made appeals to Kuhn to exercise his authority and get spring training underway.

"While it may be true we cannot possibly accept their proposal as they've presented," said Miller. "That is not to say there hasn't been progress made here. I believe Mr. Kuhn said that if progress were made he would order the camps open. Well, they're still closed so apparently he does not consider this progress."

Bob Boone, player representative for the Philadelphia Phillies, echoed Miller: "I'm appealing to the owners to get the commissioner to open the camps. It's not doing any good to the owners, the players or the fans to keep spring training closed."

Geographic Play, 64-Team NCAA Field Urged

Sports Signals

By Bob Owens
Star Sports Editor

Expand NCAA Tournament

Abe Lemons, the new head basketball coach at Texas, will take over as president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches at the annual convention next week in Philadelphia.

One of his projects during his term of office, he says, will be to look into the possibility of arranging a post-season playoff for non-conference teams that don't make the 32-man field for the NCAA tournament.

There were quite a few schools overlooked in the selection process even though some of them had records better than conference winners that were automatic entrants. Among these were Boise State, 16-10, Western Kentucky, 17-8, and Wichita State, 18-9.

One of those was Abe's Pan American team, which finished 20-5 and had the nation's leading scorer in senior guard Marshall Roberts, who averaged 36.3 points a game. Others were North Texas State, 22-4, Florida State, 20-6, and Oral Roberts, 20-6.

Here's a suggestion that might solve that problem: Expand the NCAA tourney field to 64 teams and add one week to the three weekends it now takes to determine the national champion.

This could be done by simply doubling the number of subregional sites from eight to 16 and having eight subregionals the second weekend just as we have now. Obviously, to avoid confusion, new names would have to be given these competitions.

Sectional Competition Urged

The plan would be to call the first weekend's games "Sectionals" and retain "Subregionals" for the eight sites the second weekend. Then go on to the four-team "Regionals" as will be played Thursday and Saturday this week and then "Finals" for the big shootout, which this year will be in Philadelphia March 27 and 29 (Saturday and Monday).

There is a very good reason for calling the first week's games "Sectionals." That's because the four teams at each site should come from the same geographical areas — new districts which would have to be planned by the NCAA Basketball Committee.

This would put an end to the folly started two years ago when, for example, Syracuse played a first-round game in the Midwest Regional at Denton, Tex., and Dayton played at Pocatello, Ida.

Last year, Kansas State played at Philadelphia one week and had to go back to Providence the next week. Michigan played at Pullman, Wash., and then returned to Portland, Ore., a few days later. New Mexico State went to Charlotte, N.C., while Maryland played at Lubbock, Tex. That's economy? How ridiculous can you get?

Well, here's how: Last Saturday it was Michigan and Syracuse at Denton, Tex., Memphis State at Tempe, Ariz., Georgetown (D.C) at Tempe, Ariz., St. John's of New York at South Bend, Ind., Washington at Lawrence, Kan., and DePaul of Chicago at Charlotte, N.C.

For Thursday night's games, DePaul is headed back to North Carolina (Greensboro). Had Syracuse won, the Orangemen would be on their way to Louisville, Ky., and had Georgetown and Memphis State advanced, their next games would be in Los Angeles.

All for a chance to beat defending champion UCLA on its home court at Pauley Pavillion.

Crazy, Man!

Doocy Now 'Wrestling' With Horses

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Grand Island — Tim Doocy didn't know it at the time, but wrestling in high school would greatly aid his future career.

"Wrestling helped me a lot," said the third-leading rider (after the first three weekends) at Fonner Park. "It kept me in shape. You use all parts of your body in wrestling, just like you do in riding."

Doocy finished sixth in the 1974 Iowa State High School Wrestling Tournament (Class AA) as a senior in the 98-pound division.

But after graduating from Glenwood High School after the third quarter in 1974, he started galloping horses as a "test run" before deciding if he wanted to become a full-fledged rider.

"It was just something I wanted to do when I got out of high school. I started galloping horses in South Dakota. I went to McLaughlin for Melvin Schanzenbach. I met him through an uncle and a friend of his that used to box.

"I had ridden saddle horses before, but never race horses," he continued. "I got pretty lucky and did pretty good. Each time I rode a horse I learned something new. You never stop learning."

Now it was time to become a real jockey. Doocy started in the summer of 1974 and accompanied Schanzenbach to the Pennsylvania circuit.

The Iowan rode his first winner at Commodore Downs and then went to Atokad Park near South Sioux City in the Fall.

He was second-leading rider at Atokad when he left with just a few days remaining in the meet. He slipped to third — a creditable effort for a rider with less than seven months experience.

He began the 1975 season by riding at Florida Downs, then went to Assiniboia Downs near Winnipeg, Man., before returning to Atokad Park.

Despite being a jockey for slightly more than one year, Doocy won the rider's title — on the last race of the last day.

"Fred Ecoffey and I were tied and it all came down to the last race. I was on Sugar Harvest and Fred was on another horse (Rare 'N Rich) in the ninth race. I started pulling away and won (Ecoffey's mount was third). At the time, I didn't think about it, but it was a big thrill for me. I got a trophy and I think about $70 in prize money."

In fact, Doocy enjoyed one of his best days ever on the final day of the Atokad meet. The win aboard Sugar Harvest was one of four he achieved that afternoon. He also tallied on both halves of the daily double — Niv Shois in the first and Ol Ten Percent in the second and on Pretty Bluesette.

The 20-year-old rider said veteran riders R.A. Smith, Ecoffey and Dave King contributed needed advice and assistance in his career.

"The hardest thing for me was being able to rate horses and know when to move them. Maybe starting out later than most riders helped me a little. I really don't think it hurt me to start later.

"I know a few more things now than when I started riding. I just picked them up as I went along. I don't feel it's been a big disadvantage to have started later."

Doocy, who said he likes to keep his weight at 112 to 113 pounds, was undecided where he will ride after Fonner ends on April 24.

He may go to Ak-Sar-Ben in Omaha or return to Winnipeg.

That's still a big jump from galloping horses in South Dakota just two years ago.

Houston Gains 11th In Row

Huskers Drop Openers, 1-0, 2-0

Houston — Houston University stretched its winning streak to 11 straight and spoiled Nebraska's season opener with two shutouts 1-0, 2-0, Tuesday afternoon at the Houston University ball park.

In the opener Charles Garza gained his fifth win against no losses and his second straight shutout, pitching a one-hitter while in the nightcap Bill Nelson came to the mound in relief in the fourth inning to strand two on base and preserve the win for the Cougars.

Houston gained its only run of the first game when Julio Acosta singled in Mark Wisnoski in the fourth inning. Garza then retired the next ten Huskers for the win.

Denny Buhrer, who gave up only four hits, took the loss going the distance for the Huskers.

In the second game Rick Schroeder singled with men on first and second to bring across the winning run in the fourth inning. Then in the fifth Thad Altman opened with a triple and scored on a sacrifice fly by Ralph Wheeler to help boost Houston's record to 17-5.

The Huskers collected three hits including one each by Healey, Dick Anderson and Ron Miltenberger. Nelson picked up the win to boost his record to 4-1, while Kirk Eymann, now 0-1 took the loss giving up four hits in five innings. Boyd Battenhorst came in to relieve Eymann in the sixth inning and gave up no hits and struck out one.

The two teams will face off again in another twinbill Wednesday.

Wooden: Indiana Not Yet Great

By The Associated Press

John Wooden is a skeptic when he hears about schools challenging UCLA for college basketball's supremacy.

There is, for example, unbeaten and top-ranked Indiana, which wiped out St. John's 90-70 in the first round of the NCAA Mideast Regional basketball tournament last Saturday.

Wooden, who coached UCLA'S Bruins to 10 championships in 12 years before retiring after last year's tournament, watched the game in his new role as a television commentator. Afterwards, he was asked what he thought of the Hoosiers.

"There is no doubt Indiana is a great team," he said. "They have it inside and they have it outside. They have balance and an outstanding defense, the best in the country. They're strong—extremely physical."

But Wooden also wondered if the 28-0 Hoosiers could match up to his championship UCLA squads.

"Before you compare them to any of the other great teams, they've first got to win a national championship," said Wooden. "We (UCLA) won 10 of 12 championships, seven of them in a row."

Coach Bobby Knight's Hoosiers resume their chase for a first national title Thursday night in Baton Rouge, La., against No. 6 Alabama, the Southeastern Conference champion which whipped North Carolina 79-64 in its tournament opener.

The game offers some interesting matchups, especially at center, where Alabama's 6-foot10 Leon Douglas will bang heads with Indiana's All-American, Kent Benson.

"I'm looking forward to Indiana," says Douglas. "I think our team is good enough to go all the way."

Still alive is second-ranked Marquette, 26-1, which faces No. 10 Western Michigan, 26-2, in the other Mideast semifinal. Awaiting the winner of that clash will be Indiana-Alabama survivor, with a spot in the final four at stake.

Fourth-ranked Rutgers, 29-0, a one-point winner over Princeton in its tournament opener, is favored against 18-9 Connecticut in the East Regional at Greensboro, N.C. VMI, 21-9, takes on DePaul, 20-8, in the other East Regional semifinal.

Kentucky Rallies To Nip K-State, 81-78, In NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Campbell and Bill Eason each hit four big foul shots in the last three minutes to trigger Providence to a 73-67 college basketball victory over Louisville Tuesday night and advance the Friars into the semifinals of the 39th National Invitation Tournament.

The Friars earned a shot in the semifinals against Kentucky, which earlier beat Kansas State 81-78 behind Mike Phillips' second-half scoring.

North Carolina-Charlotte and North Carolina State, who won games Monday night, will meet in Thursday night's other semifinal at Madison Square Garden.

In the first game, Phillips came off the bench to inspire a second-half rally and James Lee hit two crucial foul shots at the end to lead Kentucky past Kansas State.

Phillips, Kentucky's 6-foot-10 muscleman, was forced to leave the game when he sprained an ankle with about five minutes remaining in the first half.

Phillips sat out seven minutes of the second half while Kansas State shot into a 63-51 lead behind sharpshooting Mike Evans.

Kentucky's brawny center was inserted into the game at this point and wasted little time getting the Wildcats offense untracked. He barged in for a layup with 12:30 remaining in the game, then scored 17 more points as Kentucky moved into a 76-70 lead with 5:10 to play.

Lee's two free throws with 1:18 remaining provided the winners with an 80-74 lead and their eventual winning points.

Before Phillips took control, Kansas State had outscored Kentucky 17-4 at the start of the second half.

Chuckie Williams scored 27 points for Kansas State 20-8, while Larry Dassie had 18 and Evans 17.

Missouri Frightens Texas Tech

Lubbock, Tex. (UPI) — The quality of opposition will take a giant leap forward Thursday night for Texas Tech, and Red Raiders coach Gerald Myers knows the quality of his team's play must take a similar jump.

"Without question, Missouri is going to be a lot stronger and better balanced than Syracuse was," Myers said, "and that means we are going to have to play much better than we did last week in order to stay in the game.

"Missouri has a more experienced team — and when you get this far along it will certainly make a difference."

Tech, despite a bland evening, easily overpowered Syracuse in the opening round of the NCAA tournament last Saturday night to move into the Midwest regional semifinals at Louisville, Ky., Thursday evening against the Big Eight Conference champion Tigers.

A win in that one for Tech would put a Southwest Conference team in the regional finals for the first time since 1968, when Texas Christian met Houston.

The Tech-Missouri meeting will commence at 6:05 CST, followed by the semifinal contest between Notre Dame and Michigan.

"Missouri is well balanced on both offense and defense, and is capable of scoring at any position on the court," Myers said. "They are led by guard Willie Smith, who does a lot of things to get in the open and get good shots.

"Missouri can run and shoot, or it can play a slowed-down, deliberate game — and the Tigers are good at either. We have a lot of respect for them, especially after their victory over Washington."

Washington was one of two nonconference teams to defeat Texas Tech this season.

Although Texas Tech had little trouble with the Orangemen last Saturday, the Raiders did have some difficulty with Syracuse's full-court press.

"We work on it every day, and usually can handle it," Myers said. "But against Syracuse we just didn't execute — we had a lot of mental errors. However, we were able to fall back and play good defense in most cases so Syracuse wasn't able to capitalize on it too much."

Myers was of the opinion Tech would handle the press better against Missouri than it did against Syracuse.

Indiana Finishes First In AP Poll

BLOOMINGTON, Ind (AP) — It takes more than the ability to throw a spherical object through a cylindrical one to be the nation's top-ranked basketball team, says Indiana Coach Bobby Knight

"Our players, ranked No 1 from the start of the season, have been the object of every team s peak effort," said Knight, 'and it has taken a team of exceptional character, resolve and competitive nature to meet one challenge after another "

The undefeated Hoosiers, heading into Thursday's semifinal round of the NCAA Mideast Regional tourney, were named to their accustomed top spot Tuesday in the season s final Associated Press college poll

Knight, named last week as AP's Coach of the Year, took great satisfaction in seeing the Hoosiers finish in the No 1 ranking for the first time since their NCAA championship team of 1953

It is always pleasing to see dedication and effort rewarded, ' he said "Those certainly are two of the most important factors involved in the Indiana basketball team and its selection by The AP as No 1 in the nation

Indiana, led by All-Americans Scott May and Kent Benson, rolled to its second straight undefeated regular season and its fourth consecutive Big Ten championship

The Hoosiers also have won a conference-record 37 straight games, 57 regular-season games in a row and 62 of their last 63 games over-all

This is a remarkable group of young men, one which I ve enjoyed watching play as much as any fan, ' Knight said "They react to pressure as well as any team I've ever seen

It is every bit as much a group of outstanding young men as it is a very fine basketball team, and I've never enjoyed coaching a squad more than this one," he added

The Hoosiers received 47 of 52 first-place votes for 1,008 points in the final balloting by The AP s nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters

Marquette, which finished second to Indiana at 888 points, and Rutgers, down one spot from last week to fourth with 720 points, got two first-place votes apiece Nevada-Las Vegas, which vaulted over Rutgers into third, received the remaining first-place ballot and 732 points

Defending NCAA champion UCLA advanced to fifth, Alabama jumped two spots to sixth and Notre Dame held on to its No 7 spot Rounding out the Top Ten were North Carolina, down one from last week, Michigan, up from 14th a week ago, and Western Michigan, 16th last week

The Second Ten was headed by Maryland followed, in order, by Cincinnati, Tennessee, Missouri, Arizona, Texas Tech, DePaul, Virginia, Centenary and Pepperdine

DePaul and Pepperdine were newcomers to the Top Twenty, replacing Washington and St John's N Y , which was clobbered 90-70 by Indiana in the first round of the NCAA tourney last week

NFL Draft Dates Slated By League

CORONADO, Calif (UPI) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Tuesday the National Football League will accept no more expansion clubs in the foreseeable future and that the 1978 Super Bowl would be held at the Lousiana Superdome

The 28 NFL club owners during a seven-hour meeting decided that a veteran allocation draft will be held March 30-31 to stock the league's two new franchises, the Seattle Seahawks and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers

Rozelle said the annual collegiate draft would be held eight days later on April 8-9 Both drafts would be held in the New York offices of the NFL

The commissioner said the league turned down franchise bids from Memphis and Birmingham, former World Football League cities

"After a lengthy and thorough discussion," Rozelle said, "the clubs concluded that under the present conditions—that is our legal and labor problems—they could not firmly commit to expansion at this time

"However, it is clear these two cities were the most active in recent months and will be among those strongly considered when the league eventually feels it can expand "

Among the problems the league must overcome before expansion, Rozelle said, were court rulings that went against the NFL and the issue of collective bargaining

Rozelle said a list of eligible players would be available to Seattle and Tampa Bay the day before the allocation draft

Creighton To Join Missouri Conference

OMAHA Neb (AP)—Creighton University, an athletic independent since 1948, was expected to announce Wednesday that it will return to the Missouri Valley Conference

Tom Apke, athletic director-coach said Tuesday "an important announcement bearing on the future of Creighton athletics" would be made at a luncheon

The Creighton Athletic Board met Tuesday

The Missouri Valley grew to eight teams last week when Indiana State was made a member

At that time, Apke and Mickey Holmes of Tulsa, Missouri Valley Commissioner, both said they had talked but that no developments were solid

They said at that time the league had issued no invitation and Creighton had not applied for admission

The Omaha school dropped out of the conference in 1948 because it did not restore football to its program Football was discontinued at Creighton in 1942, during World War II

The football requisite for membership was eliminated from Missouri Valley by-laws last week Holmes had said previously that the league wanted to strengthen its basketball program

Bradley, a longtime Missouri Valley member, also has no football program At Tulsa, Holmes said Bradley played football when it became a member and was allowed to continue in the conference when it discontinued the grid game

Advantages for Creighton to rejoin the Valley would include "automatic" scheduling of probably 16 basketball games and a post season tournament, which the league reportedly plans to inaugurate next year to name its NCAA tournament representative

Current conference members are Bradley, of Peoria, Ill , Drake of Des Moines, Iowa, New Mexico State of Las Cruces, Southern Illinois of Carbondale, Tulsa, Okla , West Texas State at Canyon, Wichita State, Kan , and Indiana State of Terre Haute

TODAY'S QUESTION: DOES THE SHAMROCK HAVE THREE LEAVES OR FOUR LEAVES?
THREE!
FOUR! THAT'S WHY THEY CALL IT THE LUCK OF THE IRISH!
SURE, AND THAT'S WHY THEY ALWAYS WEAR IT ON ST. PATRICK'S DAY!
THREE? FOUR? WHO CARES AS LONG AS IT'S GREEN!
ANSWER: BECAUSE THE SHAMROCK IS A THREE-LEAF CLOVER, ST. PATRICK PICKED IT TO SYMBOLIZE THE HOLY TRINITY. A FOUR-LEAF CLOVER ISN'T A SHAMROCK.

Nastase Ban Lifted

DALLAS (AP) — The International Professional Tennis Council lifted its suspension Tuesday on controversial Romanian star Ilie Nastase, according to Bob Briner, executive director of the Association of Tennis Professionals

The move clears the way for Nastase to play in the Independent Players Association tour this week at La Costa, Calif The ban went into effect when Nastase had failed to pay the fine

Briner said Nastase, who was slapped with a $6,000 fine last week for his behavior in a tournament at Toronto, is contributing the $6,000 to the Canadian Tennis Association

"We are pleased that this matter has been concluded and we can concentrate future energies on the development of tennis," Briner said

In Toronto, Lawrie Strong, president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, said the fine perhaps was en route, but until the money was received by the organization, the suspension would remain in effect

NFL Players File Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventy-nine present and former National Football League Players filed a class-action suit in U S District Court Tuesday for damages they say they sustained as a result of the Rozelle Rule, the players union announced

Named as defendants in the suit, filed in Minneapolis, were the present 26 NFL teams, the league itself and Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The suit, filed on behalf of all NFL players who have been under contract to and been on the active roster of a NFL team at any time since the beginning of the 1972 season, seeks an unspecified amount of damages.

A second count in the complaint was brought by Jim McFarland, Ron Jessie, Bob Grim, Frank Gallagher and Gary Larsen on behalf of themselves and the class of all NFL players who have played out the option since 1972 and become free agents

The suit, according to union president Dick Anderson, is a follow-up to the recent John Mackey decision in which the Rozelle Rule regarding compensation was declared illegal The ruling is being appealed by the NFL.

Soviets Claim Sports Power

MOSCOW (AP) — A top Soviet sports official claimed Tuesday that the balance of sports power is shifting steadily to socialist countries, and denied claims by "western journalists" that the Soviet Union drills its athletes in special military-like units

"Bourgeois propaganda mouthpieces do not tire of wishful thinking of all sorts, and concocting rumors and lies in order to belittle the significance of the sports victories scored by the USSR and the other socialist countries," said Sergei Pavlov, chief of the Soviet government's Committee on Physical Culture and Sports

In an interview in Literaturnaya Gazeta, as reported by the Tass News Agency, Pavlov said socialist countries would continue to gain in sports performance because of "the fact that sports activities are within reach of the masses "

While denying that paramilitary training for athletes exists in the Soviet Union, Pavlov acknowledged that "the state spares no efforts and resources for promoting physical culture and sports among the masses "

According to recent Soviet publications, more than 200,000 "physical culture collectives" exist at factories, offices and farms The collectives, which have about 45 million members, are subsidized mainly by the state budget, trade union funds, receipts from sports events and the profits of the institutions where the collectives operate

Soviet athletes get free facilities and usually receive time off from their jobs with pay to participate in competitions, according to the Soviet publications

Curriculum Coordination Concern Of School Board

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

"The biggest single concern we have," said Lincoln Board of Education President Louis Roper, "is coordination" of curriculum among schools and through the grades.

"We field the questions of many parents" regarding foundation-building and continuity as opposed to three separate blocks of elementary, junior and senior high, Roper said

In a board work session Tuesday with administrators, Roper fretted aloud about school buildings assuming a "sovereign" role in the district's decentralized management approach

Supt. John Prasch acknowledged there are "risks inherent" when more decisions are allowed further away from the central administration It would "be a lot easier," he said, to run a "monolithic" operation with all decisions coming from on high

Run A Good Program

But Prasch said he believes the district's purpose "is to run the best possible program for kids not to make the board members comfortable in answering the public" He included administrators — himself, principals and consultants — in sharing the "heat" Roper said board members sometimes feel.

The administrators generally agreed with Prasch that shared decision-making allows more flexibility in offering programs that meet needs of children in each school, "which a monolithic system wouldn't allow."

Prasch agreed with board member Lu Pansing that by law the board is nonetheless accountable for all programs.

Ideally, he said, coordination issues could be resolved if a group of elementary schools would flow into a single junior high, and in turn always transfer into another specific high school. But the attendance zone changes required would cause "chaos," he said

Time To Listen

Meanwhile, he said, the decentralized management lends itself to broader parent and citizen participation, which also makes a harder job for the professional staff since they must take the time to listen.

Board member Pearl Goldenstein warned against listening "to bridge-table gossip and acting as though it's a mandate from the entire school district." Yet she and board members said they call principals or Prasch about complaints they receive

Jo Ann Maxey said she's received complaints that children aren't learning basics, that they get to junior high they're "still counting on their fingers and toes."

Some Intimidated

Mrs. Maxey also said some parents are intimidated and afraid to contact school staff members All those factors combine to put board members on the defensive, she said.

Evaluator Nick Novak told the board that the district's general educational program cannot be violated, and that local building flexibility allows latitude in presentation.

"You've got to remember," said Principal John Jensen of Arnold Elementary, "you just can't do everything for everybody" To the extent that shared decision-making is successful, "you have a good program," responsive to wider needs.

Mickle Junior High Principal Jack Peterson said teachers have "higher motivation" when they have "a stake in what is happening"

But since they are professionals, Peterson said, their effectiveness can't be measured assembly-line fashion. Teachers and principals, Jensen said, "have a clear concept of what's expected."

Not Serious Problem

Northeast High Assistant Principal Dick Colerick said although high school staffs "feel there's not good strong coordination," largely they "don't feel it's a serious problem."

Roper and board members overall favor decentralization, but he urged improved cooperation between the three levels of schools

The group of administrators discussed their tenuous status in contract negotiations, noting they get corresponding teacher pay and benefit increases but have different roles.

The group requested any pay boosts be distributed equally across all their pay levels, since a flat dollar figure would produce a smaller improvement for the higher paid category.

And while they cited appreciation for fringe benefits improvements since about 1968, the administrators said those should be expanded further for them They suggested spelling out via contracts their responsibilities, duties and rights.

On salary schedule placement, they noted most administrators are low or midway up the highest paid category. They requested improving retirement benefits from the $700 monthly, including Social Security

Later, the Office Personnel Association requested paid holidays based on seniority and a 30-cent increase per pay level. Their salary base is $2 50 hourly.

Miss Good And Friend Are Guilty

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Manson cultist Sandra Good and her friend, Susan Murphy, were convicted by a jury Tuesday of conspiring to send death threats to business and government leaders.

The jury deliberated a little more than 1½ hours before finding the defendants guilty on all counts

The two defendents sat passively as the verdicts were read by court clerk Walter Fitzpatrick.

Miss Murphy, who was free without bail, asked to be remanded to custody immediately, which the judge ordered. Miss Good, who was not free on bail, asked to be sentenced immediately, but the judge set an April 13 date to pass sentence.

She could receive up to 25 years in prison — five years for each of the five counts.

Miss Murphy, a former nurse, could be sentenced to five years in prison for the one conspiracy count.

Earlier in the day, Miss Good had told the jury that she would have liked to have been part of a plot let by convicted murderer Charles Manson to kill businessmen.

"It would give me great satisfaction to remove from the earth executives of Standard Oil Company" she said.

Audition Winners Offer Treat For Lincoln Symphony Goers

By RICHARD GRACE

It is always a great pleasure to hear the audition winners perform. This evening was no exception when the Lincoln Symphony, under the direction of Robert Anders Emile, featured two young artists, bassonist Mark Kelley and pianist Dianne Moore.

It is an unusual treat to hear bassoon concerto at a symphony concert. The bassoon does not fall into the preconceived idea of a virtuoso concerti instrument. However, Mark Kelley and Vivaldi's Concerto for Bassoon in E minor proved otherwise. Mr. Kelley, principal chair with the Lincoln Symphony and student at the University of Nebraska, aptly demonstrated his superior technique and fine musicianship with much ease and poise His warm tone quality and clean runs were always apparent throughout the Vivaldi work, which was scored for strings and bassoon solo. Mention must also be directed toward Loretta Love, whose harpsichord playing on the continuo part added just the proper flavor to the Baroque work.

Dianne Moore, a lovely and talented graduate student at the University of Nebraska, was equally at home at the piano keyboard Performing Concerto No. 2 in D Minor by Edward MacDowell, Mrs. Moore displayed agility, strength, and a high degree of sensitivity to the moving first movement. The MacDowell work in generally acknowledged to be among his best compositions but it is still not widely known to concertgoers. MacDowell, American by birth, was musically trained in Europe and this particular piece has strong European ties, especially those toward the Romantic Concerto so popular at the turn of the century. It was enjoyable to hear these two fine musicians and equally so to two different composers from the usual realm of concerto composers.

Conductor Emile, already noted for his excellent and diverse choice of literature, opened the program with the "New Frontier Overture" by the American composer, Robert Beadell. A professor of composition at the university does not relegate Beadell to the title of a "local" composer. He is widely known throughout the Midwest for his many compositions in so many different fields of writing This overture, written in 1962, shows fine originality, good melodic invention and sounds wonderfully American in style

The second half of the program was devoted to an extremely familiar work, Brahms Symphony No 4 in E minor One of the most popular works in the orchestral repertoire, this puts the Lincoln Symphony at a decided disadvantage when comparisons might arise with the many fine recordings available. But there is some magic about hearing a work in person and one become engrossed with the creation at hand The overall view of the performance has to be highly successful despite some spotty moments when the articulation was not as clean or crisp as desired or when Emile was pressing the orchestra for subtle tempi changes. War On Bribes Takes Feminine Twist In Mexico

Mexico City (UPI) — Mexico City authorities believe they have found a way to discourage bribetaking among traffic cops. They assigned women to write out tickets for erring motorists.

"Our girls can't be bought," says Lt. Col Maria Isabel Espinosa, chief of Group 20, the 600-member feminine contingent of the capital's police force. "We have too much pride."

Women Rangers Handle Job Despite Teasing

©The New York Times

Mesa Verde National Park, Colo — They get teased about their funny hats, the tilt of the badge on their chests and the cut of their trousers Male chauvinists call them rangerettes and "nature fakers Tourists can t believe they really know the Yellowstone back country better than their male counterparts There are only 79 of them in the country

Nevertheless women rangers still a rare species in the national parks, are becoming more and more a part of the federal government s field force The 79 women who are part of the permanent staff of 1 432 rangers (a term that includes interpreters protective rangers park superintendents and field directors) employed by the National Park Service are forging into what once was nearly a total male preserve

'We ve still got a long way to go said Sharma Bierhaus who at 42 is superintendent of Timpanogos Cave National Monument in Utah "But until five years ago there were almost no women at all in management positions

' There are other superintendents who think I m a token " went on Miss Bierhaus who was appointed to her job in November 1974 "I don t know what it s going to take to prove them wrong except you can t quarrel with doing a good job

Gains Considerable

Here in Mesa Verde, that splendid collection of early Indian cliff dwellings wedged between sandstone rocks in the southwest corner of Colorado, women are making striking gains The permanent staff of three interpretive rangers includes one woman Linda Martin 30 whose job is to explain to troops of tourists how the strange tenement-like communities of Mesa Verde came into being seven centuries ago

On the staff of protective rangers — the ones who carry guns and are responsible for safety in the parks — is another woman — Mary Jane McDowell Last summer the seasonal staff of 35 interpretive rangers included 17 women

Linda Martin who made up her mind to be a ranger as a child when her family took her on trips through various parks started out as a seasonal ranger in Yellowstone National Park Her brother in law a protective ranger used to kid her by saying Some day you ll become a real ranger

Creighton Graduate

A graduate of Creighton University in Omaha with a degree in history, Miss Martin spent part of 1973 in ranger training school at Grand Canyon, where she learned how to give walking tours, first aid and field trips as well as mountaineering and compass training She spent two years at Montezuma's Castle National Monument in central Arizona before coming to Mesa Verde

The most frequent comment about her sex she said as she accompanied about 40 hardy winter visitors down a winding path to see the Spruce Tree House dwelling was "I ve never seen a lady ranger before

Most people she said, ' just assume all rangers are men "

Miss Martin pointed out that if a male and female ranger stand side by side, most tourists still direct their questions to the man This became an embarrassment in Yellowstone, she recalled because she alone among the interpreters at Old Faithful could give directions about the area s back country so the men were forced to turn questioners over to her

Even though the Park Service is trying to hire more women, a hiring freeze on permanent employes and the priority given to Vietnam veterans is slowing down that progress Ann Rasor, a 24-year-old graduate of Colorado State University, currently works at Mesa Verde, hoping this and her three summers as a seasonal ranger will get her a permanent job

'Live In Natural Place'

Miss Rasor who majored in environmental interpretation in college, said she sought to be a ranger because ' I want to influence people on the environment and because I want to live in a natural place rather than a city

Both Miss Rasor and Miss Martin learned early that tourists routinely make wrong assumptions about women rangers

' What gets me is people who assume you re in the Park Service because you are married to a ranger," Miss Rasor said Actually, there are very few married women rangers

Progress Less

Some women in the federal government think that while the attitude of the National Park Service (a branch of the Interior Department) is improving, they say they are not doing as well in a related area, the Forest Service That s a branch of the Department of Agriculture that controls huge areas of federal wilderness, forests and grasslands

Last summer, the Park Service hired 14 women and 41 men to be season rangers, augmenting the permanent staff of 79 women and 1,363 men By comparison the Forest Service has 5 004 professional foresters, of whom only 28 are women Many of those women have administrative jobs The Forest Service has a total of 6,450 technicians and aides who do field work such as pruning and watching for fires, but only 193 of those are women

Signed one female bureaucrat, "we ve still got to deal with the resistance that comes from the idea of the 'strong man in uniform ' "

Another Man Charged With Shooting In Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Charges were dropped against one man and filed against another Tuesday in connection with the shooting of an Omaha pharmacist

Douglas Deputy County Atty Frank Pane said charges were dropped against Gary L Johnson in connection with the shooting of pharmacist Frank Bogard

Pane said charges of shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim, using a firearm in commission of a felony and robbery were filed against Bruce W Bibins of Bellevue

Bibins was arrested at his home Monday afternoon just hours after a $10 000 cash bond was set for Johnson in Municipal Court

Bogard 51 was shot in the neck at point blank range during the robbery of his near northwide pharmacy Friday night

Authorities said he will be paralyzed from the chest down as the result of the bullet which damaged his spinal column He was in serious condition at Lutheran Hospital Tuesday

Lt John Maley, head of the police robbery unit said Johnson was arrested after a witness to the shooting identified his mug shot as one of the men involved in the robbery and later picked him out of a line-up

Police said Tuesday they now have evidence that Johnson was not involved in the robbery and shooting Police are seeking a second man involved in the incident

Pane said charges are also pending against Bibins in two other robberies

TODAYS QUESTION: DOES THE SHAMROCK HAVE THREE LEAVES OR FOUR LEAVES?
THREE!
FOUR! THATS WHY THEY CALL IT THE LUCK OF THE IRISH!
SURE AND THATS WHY THEY ALWAYS WEAR IT ON ST PATRICKS DAY!
THREE? FOUR? WHO CARES AS LONG AS IT'S GREEN!
ANSWER BECAUSE THE SHAMROCK IS A THREE-LEAF CLOVER, ST PATRICK PICKED IT TO SYMBOLIZE THE HOLY TRINITY. A FOUR-LEAF CLOVER ISN'T A SHAMROCK
